Tuesday. at his house in Baggot-street, Dublin, after a lingering illness, Mary, the beloved wife of Arthur Vincent, Esq. of this city—a lady who possessed, in an eminent degree, the happy attributes of moral and religious principle, and whose life was a bright pattern of all that is amiable and exemplary in the social and domestic circle, where, in her person, the virtues which adorn the mother, wife, and friend, were seen in the best and most endearing light. The demise of this good and excellent matron must be a source of poignant grief to her fondly attached husband, and family, whose only comfort will be the contemplation of her many virtues, and the anticipation of that blessed reward which Almighty Providence extends to the good and faithful servant.

Suddenly, in Dawson-street, Frances Maria, wife of Colonel Sir William Jones Hojel, Aid-de-Camp to the King of Holland.
