

Samuel Dickson, Esq. High Sheriff elect, stated that this being the last day for the next twelve months he would have an opportunity of appearing on that Bench as a magistrate, he thought it right to bring under consideration the impropriety of disposing judicially of Revenue cases at the Police office, when they should be tried in the Court of Petty Sessions before a full bench of magistrates.

Some of the magistrates conceived they were bound to investigate those cases when called upon by the authorised officers, and after some discussion, no rule was made on the subject.

At the instance of Robert Hunt, Esq. Collector of City Grand Jury cess, Daniel Kelly, victualler, was summoned before the court for resistance to Mr. Hunt's bailiff. The defendant, who is a weekly tenant, and occupying only the lower part of the premises in which the rate was demanded, conceived he was justified in refusing to pay it, but the Magistrates having explained to him that he was bound to pay the rate, and then deduct it from the landlord, he agreed to do so.

A number of persons were fined for having dogs unlogged, and standings in the street, after which the court adjourned.

under 10s 10d. per thousand feet!—which Company have also obtained a higher price for public lights than was paid to the United General Gas Company, though the latter company provide at their own charge all posts, columns, and lamps which are now furnished at the expense of the Commissioners, several of whom are directors of the Company they contract with."

Now the reading of the foregoing "simple fact" if left uncontradicted, would lead to conclusions far from fact. First, it would lead the Dublin Public to conclude that the United General Gas Company supplied Gas by Meters generally in the City of Limerick subsequently to the New Company starting. Such is not the fact; their refusal to supply by Meter was one out of the many reasons which called the New Company into existence. I am aware they tried to supply two or three Establishments by Meter, were only successful in one instance, and although the supply by Meter was nominally 10s. the scale for contract Lighting was calculated at, and above 15s. per thousand feet.

The second assertion, "that the New Company charge to this hour 10s 10d. per thousand feet," is also incorrect. The price at present charged, and since 30th September last, is 9s. 2d. per thousand feet, and to very large consumers a further reduction is made. This reduction was made, regardless of the price charged by the old Company. The Directors of the new Company conceiving from the extent of the connections, the rapid increase of consumption, and the improved method of generating Gas that a reduction from 10s 10d. to 9s. 2d. might safely be made, it was therefore considered right that the Public should get the benefit of it, and the reduction was made accordingly.

The third assertion, "that the New Company have obtained a higher price for the public lights," is also incorrect. Tenders were called for by the Commissioners for Public Lights in May last for two years from 1st October. Tenders were accordingly sent in to the Board of Commissioners, and that from the United General Gas Company was rejected, being three shillings per lamp over the tender from the present Contractors, the price now paid being £3 15s for each lamp, burning four feet of gas per hour, 365 nights in the year, from sunset to sunrise, the tenders of the United General was £3 18s. for the same. This has reference only to the parish of St. Michael, for in other parts of the borough the United General Gas Company required £4 4s. per lamp, though those portions also are now let by the new Company for £3 15s.

The last assertion I have now to deal with, namely "That the posts, columns, and lamps, are furnished in Limerick at the expense of the Commissioners. Such is not the fact, but false in every respect, as all the posts, columns, and lamps now in use, as well in the parish of St. Michael's as in all other parts of the borough of Limerick, are the property and have been supplied at the sole expense of the present Contractors. It will now be seen how evanescent the statements are respecting the "Limerick Consumers' Company" and its concerns. By the way, may I ask if this address be really from the Hibernian Gas Company? and how are they effected by the Limerick Gas Consumers's Company? Surely they have no establishment in this City! I hope the citizens of Dublin will pause before they enter into any contract with any company—a reduction of twenty per cent on the price of gas supplied by meter may be a great sacrifice to a company, but that will depend upon the quantity supplied by meter. I see no proposition to reduce the scale of prices for contract lights, the reduction in Limerick by the old Company on those prices is thirty five per cent.

In conclusion, I may remark that gas supplied by meter at 8s. per thousand feet manufactured on the old principle and system of purification, will be found much dearer than gas at 10s per thousand, manufactured from good coals on the new principle and thoroughly purified.

I remain respectfully
 JAMES MORRIS.
