DEATH OF THE MAYOR.

"Beside, this Mayor, Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been So clear in his great office, that his virtues Will plead like angels, trumpet tongued."—

He has died beloved and regretted by his fellow-citizens of every rank and persuasion, leaving to his family a good name, which it must be their highest ambition to hand down to posterity, pure and unsullied as their excellent parent had made it, throughout a virtuous life, illustrated by every act which digni-fies the character of a Christian and a gentleman.
 The Cathedral bells continue tolling in unison with the sad feelings of the citizens at this unexpected calamity, and all the shops in the city bear on the windows the impress of grief and mourning. In port all the vessels have their drooping colours suspended half mast high. The remains of the late Mayor will be interred on Monday next, at 11 o'clock, in St. Munchin's church. The funeral will be public, and attended by all the members of the Council, in deep mourning.
 The melancholy procession will move from Clare street Chapel.

There was no inquest held on the body, as his relatives objected to a process which was only calculated to aggravate the sufferings of an afflicted household.

The Town Council is summoned for Monday next to elect a successor to the late Chief Magistrate.

The Burgesses of Thomond Ward will elect an Alderman on Tuesday next, in room of the late Mayor.

The Waterford Mail of this morning has the following just tribute to the late Mayor—"Thus is added another martyr to Repeal. The lamented gentleman being a person who had hitherto never meddled with politics, the excitement was too much for him. The late Mayor of Limerick was a man generally and justly valued for his many estimable qualities of both head and heart. In every relation of life, as a merchant, a citizen, and private gentleman, he was honoured; and up to the moment of his being invested with the civic chain, which has, alas! terminated so fatally for him, kept aloof from party strife, into which he was latterly forced by his position."

One of the speakers, at the Repeal meeting on Thursday, who rose immediately after Mr. Reuben Harvey had branded all Irishmen as a disgrace to the name, who would not become Repealers,—flared up with joy at the appearance of a man in the assembly who was not a Roman Catholic; and he ventured to deduce from that one incident, for it is rare indeed to find a Protestant in such places, that things had completely changed—for the wealth, and worth, and intelligence, and assistance, of the Irish, had
