PROTESTANT ORPHAN BAZAAR-This day, the Ladies' tand or Bazaar, in aid of the funds of the Limerick Protestant Orphan Society, was opened in the large room of the Philosophical Society House, and never was seen in ings, in that splendid apartment so great an influx of the nobility and gentry of this and the adjoining counties. er effort The room was decorated for the occasion, by Mr. Purser, with characteristic taste and elegance. The publicadifferent stalls were supplied with every article which art and fashion could devise, to captivate the attention of the visitors who came to cheer the Orphan's friend. The splendid band of the 15th Regt. attended, and performed some deligated pieces of music. The Lord Bishop of Killalo, the Earl of Clare, Major-Gen. Lord Downes, Lord Clama, Col. Cator, R.H.A. Sir Hugh Dillon Massy, Col. Maisel, Adjutant-General, &c. were present. gess roli The following Ladies presided at the stalls :- The Vicountess Guillamore, Lady Dillon Massy, Lady Franklin, assisted by Miss Douglas, and Misses Clarke; Mrs. Wm. Gabbett, and the Misses Gabbett; the Misses William Fry, the Misses Dickson, Mrs. Dr. Gelston, assisted by Miss Phillips; Mrs. John De Courcy O'Grady.
Lady Clarina, and Lady Isabella Fitzgibbon, were also present. Up to five o'clock, the room was thronged with company, and extensive purchases were made. The sales will be renewed ing that ould not to-morrow, and we trust the result will prove that the indefatigable exertions of the secretary, Rev. Godfrey Massy, to advance the interests of the society, with the co-operation of benevolent friends and patrons, will not have been fruitless. Full particulars of the proceedings of this day, and to-morrow's sale, and the contributions, &c., shall appear in our next. vember. nization

Yesterday, a gentleman's horse and gig dashed in full gallop down George's-street, the servant being unable to restrain the animal, which upset a horse and cart, near the Mail Coach hotel, but soon after his furious career was arrested by those who sprung out of the crowd, and fortunately held him. The gig was broken to pieces in the violent struggle. A gentleman driving into town yesterday by Clare-st, with his lady, nurse and child, was nearly upset by the dangerous amusement of flying kites on the road.

The paper kite struck the horse, a spirited animal, on the head, and he instantly rose on his hind feet, plunged furiously, and was turned three times in a rapid circle before the driver could restrain him from dashing off, and breaking the vehicle to pieces. The family had a most providential escape from apparent destruction. Boys fly kites, trundle hoops, and play goal upon the public roads, in the immediate vicinity of town, without any hinderance from the Police, although no practice can be more reprehensible, for all who ride or or drive on such occasions are in imminent danger of le for all h he was

AN IRISH AMAZON.—A few days since, died near Lissadell, four miles from Sligo, and extraordinary person, well known in the principal towns and villages of the West and North of Ireland, as an oyster carrier. Her proper name was Molly Carvey, but she was better known by an Irish word, expressing the opinion of her sex. She was in truth a giantess, 6 feet 8 inches high, and possessing extraordinary strength. Her usual dress was a petticoat, over which she wore a vest and coat same as a man, and had her head covered with a handkerchief. She wore blue stockings, and brogues of the largest size; her voice was coarser than that of any man. When faction fights were common in fairs, whatever side Molly joined was sure to conquer, as none could stand before her. She has been know to retake ever side Molly joined was sure to conquer, as none could stand before her. She has been know to retake Potteen from a whole party of Revenue Police, knocking down every man that oppposed her. She was 76 years of age, and very fond of whiskey, which she frequeatly drank to excess.
