A meeting of the magistrates and ratepayers of the Ennistymon Union was appointed for Thursday last, to devise means, as stated in the requisition, of saving the property of the union from confiscation, and provide sufficient relief for the destitute.

Messrs. Rorke and Copland, Vice Guardians of the Union, were in attendance.

Mr. Skerrett was called to the chair.

Mr. Cornelius O'Brien then referred to the purpose of the meeting, and read the requisition by which it had been convened, and stated it as his belief that there was not a single ratepayer in the Union, high or low, who did not feel that the proceedings under the Poor Law there were strongly tending to the confiscation of the property of the union. The last rate for the union exceeded £14,000, and that sum was to be levied not by instalments but in one payment.

Mr. John Macnamara said that he had not heard a word of this meeting until the previous day.

Mr. Marcus Patterson said it would be better to adjourn the present meeting in order that the various parts of the union might have due notice of it.

Mr. Calcutt agreed with Mr. Patterson in the propriety of adjourning the meeting.

A person here stepped forward to make some complaint of the manner in which the Vice Guardians had acted towards him.

Mr. Rorke observed that if any specific charges were to be brought against the Vice Guardians, he requested as a matter of courtesy, that they should be furnished with a copy of them.

It was then moved by Mr. Calcutt that the meeting adjourn until the 1st of June, which was carried unanimously, and the meeting separated.
