

Constable Mason this day arrested Michael and Thomas Bentley (father and son) of Broadford, after passing two forged notes of the Bank of Ireland, and a third was found in possession of one of the prisoners.

This day Constable levers discovered several forged £1 notes of the Bank of Ireland, which were passed in this City, and dated "Cork, 5th December, 1846." The numbers of these forgeries, which have been circulated in the district of Six-mile-bridge, county Clare, amongst farmers, vary, as we have seen one "No. 88,220," and another "No. 9270."

This day a woman was arrested at Messrs. Todd's establishment for shoplifting.

A company of the 47th leaves this on Tuesday for Kiltrush, to replace one of the 88th.

This morning Dr. Enright, Coroner, held an inquest at the new barracks, on the body of Private James Curley, 47th Regt. supposed to have been poisoned by a female with whom he was intimate, but the evidence of the Surgeon and Doctor of the 47th, proved the man came by his death from inflammation of the bowels, induced by natural causes.

Yesterday a girl named Callaghan was drowned in crossing the lock of the Canal, near Clonlara.

Wm. Francis, master of the Blair, from this port for Liverpool with oats, jumped overboard at night, and perished; the vessel has put into Crookhaven.

There was brisk sale and good bidding at Mr. Marshall's monthly auction of horses, this day, when some fine animals were purchased at remunerating prices to the owners. Nearly every lot entered in the catalogue went off at the sale.

Two men were identified yesterday for the attack and highway robbery of Edward Davenport, Esq., between Rathkeale and Pallaskenry.

At a meeting of the R. C. Clergy of this city held on yesterday at the Bishop's house for the purpose of adopting some means of stemming the progress of public intoxication of late so scandalously prevalent, it was unanimously determined that the names of such persons as would in future be convicted and fined for drunkenness, should be proclaimed from the different altars; and that if this remedy should prove inadequate further canonical inflictions would be resorted to. This laudable effort to prevent, or over diminish, such degrading conduct, merits not only the approbation, but the
