We have received a letter from Kilrush, complaining of a sub-agent, who books intending emigrants for America, and when the vessel comes to the station, the poor people are told there is no accommodation for them. Mathew Cowell was fined £10 at Kilrush petty sessions this week for misconduct to one of the passengers, whom he turned ashore.

A puncheon of rum, covered with barnacles, was washed on shore, on Saturday, at Seafield, county Clare. Two persons named Kelly took possession of it, but when the fishermen got the account they gave out a false alarm that the Coast Guards were coming, upon which the Kellys decamped, leaving the prize on the shore. The head was quickly knocked in, and the half-starved creatures regaled themselves so plentifully that many eases of "half-seas-over," were apparent on the coast.

Mr. William Gabbett seconded the proposition of Mr. Delmage; and Mr. James M'Carthy proposed as an amendment that personal inspection by the Guardians was unnecessary. Mr. Edwd. O'Connell seconded the amendment, which was opposed by Mr. Cullen, and a discussion ensued, which resulted in the adoption of the following resolution, proposed by the latter gentleman :-That the guardians of each division of this union be requested to attend with the relieving officers on days of receiving applications at the station house of each division, and that the former resolution in reference to admission of paupers by relieving officers be re-

A resolution brought forward by Mr. E. O'Connell, to encrease the allowance of milk to paupers for breakhet, from half-pint, to three noggins, was negatived. Mr. P.
