Paradise is beautifully situated in the County of Clare, on the junction of the Fergus, with the River Shannon, looking over an expanse of water, nine miles wide, to the opposite shores of the County Limerick; and, it is no exaggeration to say, that the extensive and beautiful prospect it commands, together with the Plantations and other improvements of the place, render it one of the most striking and desirable residences in Ireland.

It is close to the Post Town of Ballinacally, within eight miles of Ennis, and three of Kildysart, near which is a Pier where the Steamer, from Limerick, touches twice in the day: that part of the County is quiet and peaceable, and has been little disturbed at any period.
