DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—Saturday morning, a very fire broke out in the extensive wine vaults Tomkins, Winthrop-street, Cork, which seemed en the adjacent buildings with total destruc-noke was first perceived issuing from the he concerns. upon which information was l to the constabulary, a large body of ere immediately on the spot, under the nd Sub-Inspector Walker. The doors of the having been burst open, the flames quickly eir appearance, and in a few minutes, the remises were enveloped in one blaze. A large Military, under the direction of General and Colonel Beresford, were in attendance, and with the police, rendered valuable assistance ng the progress of the devouring element. The oyal Exchange, and West of England engines, at of the Military, Beamish and Crawford's, n the spot shortly after the discovery re, but notwithstanding their united efforts, re concerns were in a few hours destroyed.— has yet been had as to the origin of the he books of the establishment were saved by Auliffe, of Patrick-street, and a soldier, who down by ropes from the roof of one of the ag houses, to the office in which the books pt. The premises were insured at, it is said, —a sum sufficient to cover the entire loss.— of those who were present expressed feelings the tortures of "Tantalus," as they beheld er cask of fine old port, sherry, and whiskey, the prey of the devouring element; and many e laughable but unsuccessful attempts to ob-ean or two of the scalding liquor, which was to on all sides pouring into the gutters. are happy to find that the extensive fire which ace in the concerns on Saturday, of one of the eeful and enterprising citizens of Cork, is not o impede the business of Mr. Tomkins, which vived to-day.
