nine miles without obstruction! There were two side passengers, Mr. Quinlivan, of Clonmoney, and his son, the latter of whom remained within, but his horse leaped out of the vehicle, and sustained slight

ITALIAN OPERA—MADAME GRISI—Mr. SIMS REEVES.—It is with unfeigned pleasure we may now sure our musical friends of the happy intelligence at Mr. Joy, the enterprising manager of the Dublin theatre Royal, has succeeded in engaging the great and unrivalled Grisi, the Diva of Italian song, who will make her first and only appearance in Limerick about the 3rd week in February, in the Grand Italian opera of "Norma" supported by Mr. Sims Reeves, the greatest Tenor on the English stage, Herr Mengis Altoni, and other eminent vocalists forming the most powerful and perfect Operatic troupe that ever visited the Irish provinces, and which may be said to constitute the Ultima Thule of a Lyric managers aspirations as shadowed forth in the above auspicious announcement.— Grisi is undoubtedly the greatest tragic actress and singer on the stage, and has won her laurels, as well as histrionic as in the lyric department of the Opera.
Whether, therefore, we consider Grisi as a vocalist or an actress, in either case is she transcendent; but, when conjoining both qualifications, we shall not hesitate to enrol her in the list of the greatest singers, while we adjudge her, as her undisputed right, the most elevated position in the the Temple of Modern Lyric Drama. Madame Grisi's beauty and noble countenance, which are of the purest classical order, carries no small weight with a certain class of beholders. Of Sims Reeves, who has, in two years, achieved the most unequivocal success on the English stage, and the very first place as a vocalist, we cannot forget that he made his first appearance in this city some five years since, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Alban Croft. We then proclaimed his rising talent, as an operatic singer, and our prophecy of his successful career has been fulfilled, as he is now the greatest and most accomplished Tenor in the United Kingdom, and his rich voice and passionate style are the most decidedly Italian, out of Italy.
