This morning, at the North Strand, after a short illness, of fever, Mr. John Simpson, Superintendent of the Idiot and epileptic department of the Limerick union workhouse, and previously of the late House of Industry since the year 1816. He was a faithful, humane, and attentive officer, in the discharge of duties often painful and arduous, which require the greatest firmness, tempered with kindness and forbearance. He was, beside, a truly honest, religious man; as husband, parent, and friend, affectionate, devoted, and sincere. By every class of society the death of Mr. Simpson is deeply regretted.

Suddenly, Mrs. O'Brien, wife to Mr. Thomas O'Brien, Master of the Ennis workhouse.

At his residence, Patrick-street, Cork, Mr. Wm. Cranitch.

At his residence in the Lunatic Asylum, Ballinasloe, to which institution he was apothecary, Thomas Callan, Esq.

Mr. John Moloney, of Church-street, Ennis, grocer.

John Power, Esq. of Ballyquin house, Lieutenant in the Kilkeny Militia, and for twenty years cess collector for the barony of Decuss Within Drum, in the county Waterford.

On the 16th July, Frances Geraldine, the infant daughter of Thomas Judkin Fitzgerald, Esq. Golden Hills.

Robert O'Brien, Esq. O.R. son of Wm. Coppinger, Esq. of Cork, in the 23d year of his age, caused by an accident whilst out fowling: the barrel of the gun becoming loosened, it went off, and the contents were discharged, shattering his right leg in a frightful manner, whereupon mortification set in, and proved fatal.

In Cork, Ellen, relict of Patrick Armstrong, Esq.

On the 16th inst. at Knockary mills, Queen's Co., Eliza Mitchell, relict of the late Daniel Mitchell, Esq. deeply and deservedly lamented by an afflicted family and a numerous circle of friends.

At Gresham-terrace, Kingstown, Jane, wife of Col. Charles Nesbit Knox, of Castlelacken, county of Mayo.

At Belmont House, Bray, in her 19th year, Dorothea Mary, only daughter of Richard Halahan, Esq. M.D.

Cork, July 9.

PEAT GUANO, INVALUABLE FOR
Turnip, Clover, Vetches, the Kitchen and Flower Garden,

THIS native preparation has now had an extended sale under the most distinguished and discriminating patronage. Its use, components, and results, having, for some time, engaged the serious attention of the Agricultural Public—offering most materially from Peruvian Guano, which can only be obtained at a cost of £9 to 10 guineas per ton. It is supposed to be equally or more efficacious, owing to the large amount of pure Carbon it contains, whilst the proportions of sulphate of Lime and fixed Ammonia render it as a powerful exhilarant, more than equal to its costly and imported rival.

The real utility of the Peat Guano having been well tested, its recognition as a valuable agent at once follows; it is confidently recommended.

FOR TURNIP—On account of its strong stimulating qualities, thereby preserving this important Crop from the ravage of the Fly, whilst its carbonaceous components evidence its benefit to the Land as a healthy and permanent Manure. 5 cwt., well mixed and sparingly applied, is sufficient for an Acre.

FOR CLOVER—In this case its value cannot be questioned. The large proportion of Gypsum (or sulphate of Lime) contained in the Peat Guano produces the greatest beneficial effect, particularly as this Crop is more dependant on earthy or Alkaline salts than any other. 6 cwt. sown broadcast, after mowing, and before rain, will be of the most material service.

WINTER VETCHES—Here the great utility of the Peat Guano first became apparent, tried under the directions of General Sir R. Burke, KCB. The produce was as abundant as compared to the heaviest application of Farm Yard Manure. This crop is now ready for the scythe, and will prove the undoubted advantage and merit of the Peat Guano to the most prejudiced and unacquainted.

The locality of this crop is opposite the National school of Ahane, on the property of General Sir R. Burke, KCB, Thornfield, whose stewards will communicate the result of this interesting experiment.

FOR THE KITCHEN GARDEN—Its use sparingly for this purpose, well mixed with dry Loam or Turfmould has been productive of the best effects.

FOR FLOWERS—The attention of Florists is requested to the peculiar results attendant on the use of the Peat Guano. The wood forms more rapidly, the plants exhibit more vigour, the petals and blossoms are more abundant. It deepens, darkens, and, in some cases, changes every colour, except yellow, giving a more defined brilliancy to this most lovely of Nature's inanimate, but expressive productions.

It may be obtained (PRICE £3 PER TON) of every respectable Seeds Merchant in Limerick, or of

JOHN BERNAL,
23, George-street.

Country Agents charge the carriage only additional. It may be worth while noting that the most respectable and influential references can be given.

Mr. GEORGE W. BASSETT is the only Travelling Agent for this Company.
