TO THE EDITOR OF THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.
 Belvoir, Wednesday Morning.

SIR—I have just seen the Limerick Reporter of yesterday, and hasten to relieve you from the charge of having mutilated the letter which I addressed you in reference to me, signed "an Eye Witness," in which my name was introduced in alluding to the Six mile bridge affair.

I made two copies of the letter I addressed you. Having reached you too late for insertion on Wednesday, I availed myself of the opportunity it afforded, and at the instance of a friend, consented to abstract two passages which were deemed rather too strong, called at your office, and erased them from the proof. I sent the second manuscript copy to the "Reporter" showing how the letter originally stood, (but with this passage I refer to scored out) and requested its insertion.

I regret I should have so indistinctly conveyed myself as to lead the Editor of the Reporter to suppose that you, Sir, had expunged those passages without my sanction, as nothing was further from my intention, or the fact,

I remain, your obedient servant,
 D. J. WILSON.
