The following appeared in part of last impression:

We stated in our last regarding the patronage of the Lord Bishop of Limerick, that Ardeanny was an exception to its general small amount. We have since heard this living does not net more than £150 a year to its present incumbent, owing to a heavy charge for building, poor rates, &c. This is but a small consideration for a clergyman of Mr Westropp's eminence and standing, and shews what little power the Bishop has adequately to compensate clergymen of undoubted piety and character. Perhaps if the same necessary deductions were taken from the figure set down as the value of Killeedy, given to Rev Thos. Willis, it would be reduced also.
