

at least, we never can forget, and we sown their services. The hills, the valleys, the rivers, the very graveyards, their name and record their good deeds to a verity, and bear testimony that everything religious orders in Ireland bears upon it their Divine origin, the seal of their im- pe, and the pledge and germ of their resur- rectoration to their former glory.

our children, we wish that commerce and ould flourish—if we wish that the arts and ould advance—if we wish that our schools ublishments of public institution and pub- ouse should prosper—if we wish to see, as oor fed, the afflicted comforted, the naked sick attended, and the ignorant instructed, h all these noble objects, shall we not wish religious institutions again arise Phœnix- amidst those ruins where religion has so e refuge, and with her ancient glory behold eed re-assume the ornaments of her walk abroad upon the face of this afflic- , to personate her Divine founder, and go ng good." Such has been the ambition of it advancement and success is the pride of re years, and I am yet (thank God) san- he hope of witnessing their restoration to t splendour, and I will sing a canticle of essed a result.

ears ago, my dear children, there were but n Brothers in this city, now there are six ; they had then but two schools, now they s in every parish of this city, and in this St. Michael, they have three gigantic nts, they were then confined to the city, re, thank Heaven, spreading themselves e smaller towns, and in thus labouring to igious wants of the people they had but e to draw on, a treasury, however, which, I never fail them, the faith, the hopes, and ent charity of their fellow-citizens. "Gold know they have not, but what they have given." But to accomplish those happy must have the zeal, the prudence, and the Bishop, like our own Catholics animated public spirit of the citizens of Lime- igious body, like the Christian Brothers, self-sacrificing, and above all pupils now see before me, and we shall see the rothers and their Christian Schools con- e religious education of that youth, who ons hope, and thus shewing themselves as ave been, the best benefactors of our anding here my dear children in the centre eautiful and appropriate gifts, the holy Jesus, Mary, and Joseph, I place you er their holy patronage, that they may be s, and your guardians against the danger d, and when you and I shall appear before Pastor of us all, my joy shall be enhanced by with those dear lambs of the flock, whose o me is one of the sweetest recollections ss in my memory. Be assured that never end the Altar which they are destined to that I shall not commemorate you my dren of the Christian Schools, and never om you the saintly teachers who were my s, and whom I trust, I will be able by God's tain unchanged to the end of my life.

no doubt but Dr. Leaby will be the new bishop of Cashel.
