

companies had now three the line.
 our through Connemara.
 dstock with whom Mr.
 entertained Mr John
 Fleetwood, Bart Sir
 Daly, Mr James Daly,
 r Valentine Blake, Col
 mer on Sunday.
 s died in England last

s tried in Liverpool on James Parr—the defen-spectable farmers in the
 of the seduction was only t is a married man, and of the closest intimacy.
 daughter, by promising
 eath, and, notwithstand-en lodgings for her in npathize with her family in in her pursuit. His discovery of some letters
 A verdict for £400 da-
 his monster.

n China several millions ken of as one of the new in the Orkney Island's some thousands made its ght before the magistrates gamy, and admitted to rived from Quebec with to be married to the
 t, of Spain.
 oe married to the daughter s been very prevalent in

 of Gort.
 e loss experienced by des and public offices upon eigns."

Queenstown Cork, by had her pocket picked een pounds.
 al throughout New York
 ved of the successful lay-d all over America there ags.

of car-drivers at Kilkee, they are unknown, the t they shall wear badges.
 t one student from either s in Ireland has presented he recent competitive ex-arrived at Dr. Baxter's d themselves of the ex-to Cork on Saturday last. letter from Ballarat dated a nugget of gold weigh-00 has been dug out by a whom it was called the merry christening they

 on.

Directors offers a free pas-ho passed the July exami-
 their departure overland sentenced to a month's imprisonment. Ellin Collins and Ellen Higgins were sentenced to a week's imprisonment for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Patrick and Mary Quirke were fined 5s. for fighting in the streets. Several drunkards were fined.

At the City Police Court yesterday, before the Mayor and Ald. Watson—Ellen Prendergast and Johanna Browne, were remanded on a charge of picking half a crown out of Mrs. Scanlan's pocket in the Imperial Bakery, Patrick-street, John Lyons a noted and dangerous character, who "shammed" insanity, was brought up for prowling about at night, going into a ship, entering the cabin, and endeavouring to commit a robbery. and was committed in default of finding bail, to be of good behaviour for the future. James Corney, a lunatic, and his mother, were ordered to be set off to Cork whence they came. Catherine Purcell, a prostitute, for larceny of £1 5s. from Michael Doherty, was discharged, there being no prosecution.

At the Police office to day, before Ald. Watson and Mr. Barron—Ellen Prendergast and Johanna Browne two pick pockets, were committed in default of finding bail as dangerous characters, Patrick Sullivan was remanded till Friday, for picking Mr. James MaGrath's pockets. John Malone was sent to gaol for a month, for assaulting Mr. Gilbert Dowling.

MR. CHARLES DICKENS—Rumour, with its thousand tongues, has noised abroad that it is the intention of Mr. Charles Dickens to gratify those of his admirers who have not been able to visit the metropolis and listen there to his highly dramatic rendering of his works, by making a provincial tour during the autumn of this year. For once "rumour" has a foundation of truth; as we have been informed that not only has Mr. Dickens thought about, but has actually projected a tour in the country, and moreover, we have very good authority for stating that he intends to visit Limerick on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 1st and 2nd September, and we have little hesitation in declaring that Mr. Dickens will find his Reading in our town as highly appreciated and as warmly supported as any of those he has given in London.

Mr. Charles Swan has retaken the Theatre Royal in this city, and will shortly introduce a new theatrical company of great ability, for public entertainment.

Mr. John Morris Hogan, pianist, a native of Limerick, had the honour of performing Thalberg's "God save the Queen" and "Rule, Britannia," before the Queen and the Royal party, upon the occasion of their visit to Stoneleigh Abbey, a short time since.

GARRYOWEN FOR EVER!!—A gentleman, from the South of Ireland, who went in his yacht to see the feles at Cherbourg, informs us that, he was not a little surprised and pleased at hearing a French military band, stationed on the quay, strike up the enlivening strains of "Garryowen-a-Gloria!" and play them in a beautiful manner. On going ashore, his pleasure and astonishment were further increased, on learning that the master of the band was not only a "Son of the Sod," but even a native of this old city of the "Violated Treaty!"

WEIGHT OF BREAD,
 In 3d. Loaves, taken this day by order of the Rt. Worshipful the Mayor:—

lb. oz.		lb. oz.
Reuben Harvey,	1 15½	Thomas Donnelly,	1 14½
Michael Dawson,	1 14½	William O'Donnell,	1 15
Michael Ryan,	1 14½	Denis Magrath,	1 11
James Bannatyne,	2 0	Ellen Russell,	1 14
J N Russell,	1 14	Patrick Hayes,	1 14
Henry Lyons,	1 14	William Dunworth,	1 14½

tation of seeing the party to whom turned with it to the Steamer's office. Mr. Hale presented himself with an anxious face inquired after property, and also whether any money had been sent to him from Queenstown. The clerk replied. "Dear me," replied Mr. Hale. "I had to leave a £5 note with my Queenstown, as he had no change—him about it. After stopping so long at Cogan's, he left the house without paying, then went to the terminus of the Great Western Railway and left his box to the Station Master, Mr. Sullivan, giving him a note to Mr. Litton, and stating his intention to return to Dublin the following morning. He appeared (Sunday) morning at the terminus just before the train was about to start, and entered into conversation with the Station Master at the station, in which he took occasion to give a few hints as to his vast possessions. After a length hearing the bell ring he checked his pocket, crying, "bless me! I have left my purse, and must have left it on the Imperial. I suppose there would be some one to send for it before the starting of the train. I would send for it before the starting of the train if I could find a gentleman to whom he appealed to whom he would not be time to do so, but that if he could find one at the Imperial it would be safe. "Of course," replied the soi-disant gentleman, "how shall I get up to Dublin; I have no money to pay my fare; it is too bad. I would like to have a pointment for 50/." Could you accommodate me with a loan of a few pounds?" The party to whom he appealed referred the request, although he had previously, suspecting that he was answering the descriptions which had been given of him in the Papers, and politely declining to do so, out of his power to accommodate him in the manner he required. "Oh, very well, it is all right. I shall go back to the Imperial, and see if I can get it in the evening." He left the terminus and went to the house of a woman named Mulholland, where he took a bed room, and remained until the following morning. He represented himself to her as a gentleman who had lately died, leaving a large estate in this county, and a large family, and that, unfortunately for themselves, the estate was illegitimate, and that he had come to the purpose of taking out administration of the estate. After leaving Mrs. Mulholland's house, he proceeded to the establishment of Mr. Saunder's, where he took some refreshment there, stating that he was in a state of great perplexity, as his uncle, a surgeon in the navy, had lately been killed in a city, and having been stripped of his property, he had enlisted as a common soldier, and taken away to join his regiment. He was passionately desirous of his position, and advised him to go to the War Office and demand his property, which would be granted, as he was in her Majesty's service, at the termination of his term. This Mr. Hale said he would do, and meantime asked Mr. Saunders to recommend him to put up at some quiet hotel where he could receive the answer from the War-office. Mr. Saunders recommended him to put up at Curran's street. Mr. Hale, with many professions of gratitude, left him, stating he would stay at the hotel, and he would call in the evening and partake of some refreshment of which he had partaken. He then went to Curtin's Hotel, and it was there that the circumstances occurred.