The Literary Budget.—Speaking of this, the only Monthly Literary Paper that we have, a contemporary says :—"Step by step, gradually but surely, this publication is advancing to the position of a recognised first class Monthly Review. Apart from the Reviews, there are articles in the Budget as ably and powerfully written as any to be found in the Saturday Review.
Without being guilty of any impropriety, we may say that the contributors comprise a number of the ablest London writers, who have already achieved a distinguished position in English literature. It is not difficult for the successful to achieve increased success, and the Budget is undoubtedly destined to win a remarkable popularity. The growth of the Budget indicates its home influence, which we very cordially hope will extend until it embraces every English circulating library, reading-room, and the table of every man capable of appreciating good writing and the instruction and pleasure imparted by vigorous criticism."
—The Literary Budget (price One Shilling) is published by Messrs. Saunders, Otley and Co., 66, Brook-street, Hanover Square, London.

The King of Hanover has just been received into the corporation of cobblers, the most ancient in the kingdom of Russia. His son has also been received.
This custom of great personages getting admitted into trades corporations is not of German origin, but has been imported from England, and excites much merriment here. George the 3rd was a button maker, his wife Queen Charlotte was a spoon maker and turner, and George the 4th was a member of the Guild of Tailors, and William the 4th belonged to the Guild of Barber Surgeons the most ancient guild of all for it has been in existence since "blood letting" was first discovered.
