

where the mob incited by the priests to assemble—when they saw a reader forth on his lawful mission, and with and fifes and kettles surround and pre-him from discharging his duty, but all obstacles were overcome, and now the readers walk the streets not only without fear of force, but protected by the very mob who used before persecute and assault them. He next all to the triumph of the Gospel in Fermoy through perseverance and indomitable Christian courage of Rev. Mr. Colles who had his placards and his rats, and his hearers, and his converts, now without cessation. He (the Rev. speaker) was once in Fermoy, and he was afraid that it was useless for the Rev. Mr. Colles to contend against the array of Roman. The Cathedral, the College, the Nunnery, schools, were all in array against him, but what was the result? In a few years by perseverance and that when a mission of the Jesuit Fathers—Fathers who of old made emperors and kings even popes tremble, were trembling in the chapel of Fermoy (hear, hear). In Cushendal the same result followed as in Fermoy. There the people all at one time Roman. The missionaries went against them, and the consequence was, that more than half the inhabitants had left Rome and were now members of the true Christian Church of Christ—there was a mission of Holy Fathers there. These Fathers were challenged to discussion, but they shrank from it, and thus it was, wherever controversy was carried on the priests of Rome shrank from it. The Rev. Gentleman entered into a detailed account of a controversy entirely historical and partly theological—which he carried with a countryman about Henry VIII., who was charged to be the founder of the Protestant religion, but whom he demonstrated to be a Romanist in his life, and up to his death, to the great astonishment of the countryman. He then spoke of the mission in Connemara, which he depicted as in a most flourishing condition, and concluded by hoping that all would go forward in every desirable way by payers, until all Ireland—its hills and its valleys—should be as rich a garden, well watered, to the glory of God (hear, hear, and applause).

The Rev. Mr. Gregg (of Trinity Church) said that the very able addresses which they heard in the late hour of the evening it would not be prudent in him to address them, but he could not refrain from saying a few words in support of the Irish Church Mission. It was his lot to be connected with a Missionary Society, and it was also his privilege to visit Connemara, where he had full evidence before his eyes to convince him that God was blessing those Missionary Societies and developing the truth as it is in the Lord amongst the people, and he held in his hand something about the progress of the mission in that portion of the land. (The Rev. Gentleman here read a letter from Connemara, in which the writer said that 51 persons had been confirmed by the Bishop of Down, all these, except five, were converts from Romanism.) The Rev. Gentleman then entered into a circumstantial account of the rescue, in Connemara, of a man who had been an incorrigible drunkard, and of his family from misery through the instrumentality of the Society. One of these children were now in the Society's school in Connemara. He then concluded by hoping that a missionary would be placed in Limerick. It was said by the Society that there was not money, but he could assure those who said so, that there was plenty of money in Trinity church, and he would not be until he had one in this city. The Rev. Mr. Gault explained how the mission was conducted into Cushendal. The Doxology was then sang and the meeting separated.

The Guardians of the Mountmelick Union have adopted the proposition for increasing the salaries of the medical officers from £75 to £100 per annum. The Madrid journals mention great distress as prevailing in Catalonia, in consequence of the dismissal of workmen from the cotton manufactories caused by want of raw material. Subscriptions have been sent to provide work for the men. Mmes. Marietta Grisi, mother of Mmes. Carlotta and Ernesta Grisi, has just died at a very advanced age at the Villa, Grisi, near Geneva. A letter from Belgium in the Monde of Tuesday says, that during her Majesty's stay at Laeken on a visit with her Royal uncle, the King of the Belgians, the Queen, accompanied by the Duchess of Brabant, visited the Pensionnat of the Dames du Sacre Cœur, at Sainte St. Pierre, near Brussels. Her Majesty assisted at the devotions in the Convent chapel, and read several Cantiques to the ever-Blessed Mary, sung by 200 of the convent boarders. — Tablet.
