

FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

SUNDAY, MARCH 9.—The long-steamer Merrimac has at last and yesterday afternoon, with gunboats which came out with Jamestown, down the James upon Newport's News and the at that place.

First seen from the ramparts at her way to Newport's News, at 10 o'clock. Two rebel gunboats were carried a rebel flag at the stern, and at the mast-head. The Merrimac at her bows, which was described as a blue flag, and by others as red, bows, and stern of the Merrimac sloping iron plates, extending below the water line and meeting at a house. At her bows on the sharp iron points, resembling or 7 feet apart. Her number of 2, but she might not have had so many were seen two guns, projecting ortholes.

The enemy did not become apparent until 2 o'clock, and by that time the under way for the scene of action.
The ship, having been disabled by the time some time since, was taken in by a Dragon and Young America.
At the time the alarm-gun of Fortress and the whole garrison promptly fired. The Tenth Regiment of New dressed by Colonel Bendix, and with great delight at the prospect of seeing under orders for some time, the rebel until they should be wanted.
The ship pursued their way to Newport's Merrimac soon turned the point, and from the fortress. The first shot fell from Cumberland, at a little past Bell's Point battery then opened which was passing, and the Sawyer ships replied with a few shots at details of the action could not be reported, but a telegraphical dispatch was received that the Cumberland and Merrimac were in quarters. As the latter approached, she did not pay any attention to firing two guns at the Cumberland struck her with her sharp bows, and she rolled in her at the water line seven feet. The Cumberland immediately commenced firing upon the Merrimac, backing a short time a second time making another error, which caused the water to run at a rapid rate. The Cumberland continued until she began to enter her port-holes, and rolled over slowly, and finally sank at the Newport's News battery and the Cumberland fired continuously upon the Merrimac, the apparent effect was produced upon
