British Workman's Almanac.—Same publishers. It will be found a most useful work, and should be in every well regulated household; for, besides the regular calendar, it contains short moral essays and a text of Scripture for every day in the year. The price of this valuable publication is only one penny.

Workman's Friend.—W. Kent & Co., Paternoster Row, London.

This is a new work edited by the Rev. Charles Kingsley, LL.D., and devoted to the service of the working man, with the view of disseminating knowledge amongst the sons of toil, and to advance the dignity of labour, by leading the labourer forth to the pleasant fields of intellectual cultivation. The work will support the cause of Christianity and will avoid all ecclesiastical and sectarian controversies, and will sympathise in every effort for suppression of intemperance, and will faithfully refer to the merits of every measure proposed for moral or physical improvement of the people. Friend will also devote a portion of its space to an important and grave subject of emigration, and endeavour to detail the peculiar advantages of different colonies as fields of enterprise and industry for the adventurous emigrant, who may wish to seek fortune abroad. This publication comes within the reach of every one as its price is but one penny.

Millan's Magazine.—23, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, London.

The February number of "MacMillan" has come out, and places before its readers a variety of instructive and entertaining matter. "Ravenshoe" still presses, and is becoming deeply interesting. "The trials of an Old Bachelor" is an amusing production. "Ten days in the Crimea" will be read with a new seriousness, particularly when the reader will remember that 250,000 human beings, sacrificed to the ambition of one man, lies buried within and about the metropolis. The other papers are—"Suggestions for improvement of our representative system," by James Haig, Esq.; "The raised beach of Britain, how Scotland has risen in the world," by Archibald Geikie, Esq., F.R.S.E., & F.G.S. "Gone," a poem, by the Hon. Mrs. Norton, on the death of the late Consort; and, finally, a political paper—passing events, or a retrospect of the American culture."

The Dublin Quarterly Journal of Medical Science.

Messrs. Fannin, Grafton-street, Dublin. This work will be found of inestimable value to medical men. It contains original communications, reviews, abstracts, and reports in medicine, surgery, and collateral sciences, and we are persuaded that it will be found a primary auxiliary to the medical profession. Its typography, its illustrations, and its errors reflect the highest credit upon its spirited and enterprising publishers.

The Magazine Almanac.—Paten and Co., Wine-office Court, Fleet-street, London.

This is an Insurance Directory, which contains lists of the directors of all insurance companies, the full particulars of every change which has taken place among insurance companies; the companies at present doing up in Chancery, with the rates of premium on all life offices. Professional and mercantile men will find this a most useful work. Its price is only one penny.

The Corn Hill Magazine.—"Philip" is still progressing on his way through the world, but is somewhat
