

Mr. HENNESSY said he would withdraw his amendment, but at the same time, his objections to the bill were unchanged. He should certainly renew his amendment when the second reading came on. The motion for the second reading was then postponed till some night after the return of the Attorney-General for Ireland.

LONDON, JULY 17.

PARLIAMENTARY SUMMARY.

In the House of Lords, yesterday, the Marquis of Normandy gave notice of his intention to ask, on Monday, for information respecting the military insurrection in Greece, and an alleged refusal of the British consul to give protection to the Ionians.

The Marquis of Clanricarde evinced his friendly recollections of the Irish courts by moving a resolution to have judicial statistics collected here, as in England, by a competent person appointed by the Home Office, and annually furnished. The "competent person" will, probably, enjoy the only practical benefit to be derived from this miscellany.—Earl Granville observed that the information required was given in another form. The motion, however, was agreed to.

In answer to a question by Lord Talbot de Malahide, Earl Granville stated that, after consulting with the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, it had been decided not to carry out the recommendation of the Commissioners who reported that the Royal Irish Academy should be affiliated to the Royal Dublin Society.

The Irish Prisons Bill was ordered to be read a third time. A batch of other Irish measures,—viz., The Removal of Irish Poor Bill, the Growing Crops' Seizure Bill, and the Marriages' Registration Bill,—were read a third time, and passed.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Maguire put a question with respect to the disturbance in the North of Ireland, and Sir R. Peel, in reply, stated that his attention had been called to them, but that the accounts of them were greatly exaggerated.

Mr. M'Mahon gave notice of his intention to move for the appointment of a Royal Commission to consider the propriety of abolishing the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Mr. C. Fortescue, in answer to a question, stated that despatches had been received confirming the reports of another expected outbreak in New Zealand.

Mr. Hennessy moved a resolution for the purpose of opening to general competition the junior appointments in the Civil Service.—Mr. Cochrane cast ridicule on the system.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer defended it.—Mr. Maguire complained that practically the better class of appointments were not open to competition.—Mr. G. Bentinck contended that the system had neither diminished the patronage of the Government, nor improved the quality of the public officers.—Mr. Milnes complained that members were bored by demands for nominations.—Lord Palmerston justified the exercise of Government patronage. After some discussion, the House divided, and the resolution was negatived by a majority of 81.

Mr. Bass called attention to street music, and suggested that the law should be rendered more stringent against it.—Lord Fermoy observed that the passage of carts through the streets with "Bass's pale ale" painted on them was a worse nuisance.—Mr. C. Bentinck gave a lively account of the musical arrangements of his neighbourhood, which seem to be of a varied and rather exciting character.—Mr. Bruce observed that the law, as it stood, was sufficient to protect the ears of the public.

Mr. Blake referred to the management of Irish lunatic asylums, and asked whether the Irish Government intended to take any measures to improve the treatment of the inmates.—Sir R. Peel explained what had already been done to ameliorate their condition.

Mr. G. Duff moved for papers relating to Matamoros and the Spanish Protestant exiles.—Sir G. Bowyer made a characteristic attack on them, imputing to them that they had engaged in revolutionary designs from mercenary motives. He also seized the opportunity to contradict a statement made by Lord Palmerston in a recent speech, respecting a sermon preached by a Jesuit priest in Italy.—Lord Palmerston gave credit to the Government of Spain for liberal intentions. With respect to the denial of his statement, the noble lord referred to a letter, since received, which substantially confirmed its accuracy.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

The present seasonable weather tells favourably upon the Crystal Palace. It is now in full swing, excursions of all classes and from various parts of the country are daily found enjoying the Palace and its varied attractions.

July is always a busy month, and the present year forms no exception to the ordinary rule.

Great preparations are being made for the Distribution of Prizes won at the Wimbledon Meeting. This will take place on Monday, and it is expected that the Duke of Cambridge, as Commander-in-Chief, will preside.

Advertisements intended for publication in the LIMERICK CHRONICLE should be sent to the office before 12 o'clock on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, otherwise they will be late for insertion.

THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 18, 1863.

Francis M'Namara Calcutt, Esq., M.P. for the county of Clare, died at his residence in London on Thursday evening. The hon. gentleman had been for some time seriously ill, without hope of recovery. Mr. Calcutt was well known as one of the leading gentry of his native county, and distinguished himself in the Senate as a sincere and zealous Irishman, devoted to the interests of his country and its people. Sir Coleman O'Loghlen, Bart., Q.C., has proceeded to the county of Clare to canvass the electors. The address of the honourable and learned gentleman appears in our columns.

Thomas M'Namara, Esq., of Corbally, has purchased the valuable property of Carrigkenry in this county, containing over 700 acres.

We should have stated in our last that Mr. Edward R. F. Mansergh, (not Lieut. Edward R. F. Mansergh) has arrived at Foley's lodge, Lisdoonvarna, County Clare for the season.

A fearful accident occurred on yesterday evening at the Wellesley Bridge by which a poor little girl, aged 12 years, named Mary Madigan, the daughter of a tin-plate worker, residing in High-street, lost her life. A portion of this bridge opens for the admission of turf-boats from the river to Arthur's-quay, and the operation is performed by swivels the machinery of which works underneath, where there is a passage to a plot of ground where poor people send their linen to be bleached and watched by their children. The deceased and some of her little companions were thus occupied when the opening of the bridge commenced, and, like all children, had the curiosity to inspect the working of the machinery, from whence she was driven away on two occasions by the persons in charge, but still a fatal curiosity impelled her, and watching an opportunity, when no one was observing her, she again approached the machinery, and coming into contact with it, her hair, which was long for her age, became entangled in the cogs, when, horrible to relate, before relief could be given, part of the skull was sawn off by the inexorable machine. Doctors Gelston, jun., and Burke were in immediate attendance, but all medical aid was of no avail. The poor child was removed, insensible and dying, to that home which she left that morning in the enjoyment of health and youthful innocence and hopes. She died shortly after her arrival at home.

Yesterday a distribution of prizes to the scholars who had distinguished themselves at the Summer Examination at the Christian Schools, took place at Sexton-street. A silver watch was awarded to a boy named Michael Jones, for having shown a thorough knowledge of English Composition, Geometry, Algebra, Trigonometry, and for having evinced a great proficiency in perspective drawing, &c. The Band of the Limerick County Militia attended, and played several pretty airs.

Matthew Dillane, sentenced at our assizes to ten years penal servitude, for conspiracy to murder the late Mr. Francis Fitzgerald, is now in Mountjoy prison, Dublin, where he is to undergo punishment for the first five years, and the remaining five at Spike Island, Cork.

The Attorney-General will attend at the Nenagh Assizes to prosecute, on the part of the Crown, the person charged with firing at Gore Jones, Esq. R.M.

The Galway contract for the hire of packets to America was signed on the part of the government and on that of the directors of the Galway Company on yesterday.

Mr. John Parsons, emigration agent, Ennis, is sending forward a number of passengers from districts of the county Clare, to New York, by the ships of the Black Ball and Eagle line of packets.

It is said that Drogheda will be contested on the retirement of Mr. M'Cann from the representation, and that from the present state of the Burgess roll there will be no chance for a Whig.

Viscount Gough has taken his departure from Kingstown for London.

The Right Hon. Lord Carew and Lady Carew and family have arrived at Castleborough, from Belgrave square, London.

Robert Longfield, Esq. Q.C., M.P., has returned to his residence in Dublin from London.

Lord and Lady Vaux have left Dublin, for England. The O'Donoghue, M.P., has arrived in England.

Sir Henry Winston Barron is to be married to Miss Somerset, daughter of the late Lord Charles Somerset.—Court Journal.

For the first time ladies have been introduced to entertainments of Masonic bodies. At an installation
