DEATHS.

On Monday, the 18th inst., to the deep regret of his nume- rous friends, and the inexpressible grief of his bereaved widow, David John Wilson, of Belvoir, in the county of Clare, Esq. To superior intelligence and a cultivated mind he joined in an eminent degree those general qualities which constitute the charm and attraction of social life. A magis- trate and grand juror of over fifty years' standing, he dis- charged with zeal and ability the duties appertaining to his rank, whilst he offered in his person during the same long period an example of practical patriotism well worthy of general imitation, by residing permanently on his estate, where he spent his time and income in promoting employ- ment; and in the exercise of a generous hospitality. By those who had the happiness to know him in the domestic circle, or to share his personal regard, his memory will be long and warmly cherished as that of a tender and affectionate hus- band and a steadfast friend.
