

we have paid two rates in our own wrong. We request you will order the overcharge of the last rate on these concerns to be refunded to us. The board is aware we never hesitate to pay all rates without trouble; and the result of this special revision, and the ordinary revision since, in which many more of our concerns were reduced, shew that we have for years paid large sums in excess of our fair liability. We, therefore, ask for the rebate of this £15 as a simple matter of justice.

Your obedient servants,
J. N. RUSSELL & SONS.

Mr. Brown said that this was a very fair request.

After a few observations from some members of the board as to the power of the guardians to deal summarily with this matter, it was ordered that the Clerk should write to the Commissioners on the subject.

Mr. D. Doyle (to the Master)—Who, or what is this Mr. Wright.—Is he a clergyman?

Master—No. He is, as I learn, the brother of a deceased gentleman in the city, who was a master shoemaker of respectability; and I understand that Mrs. Tracey's husband worked for him for twenty years.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy—Is this man in the trade now?

Master—Not to my knowledge; but I heard that the mother of this Mr. Wright is carrying on the business.

Mr. Doyle—Was there not a second person engaged in this transaction?

Master—Yes. He was accompanied by a man that, as I am given to understand, is the Master of the Ragged School in Bowdye's-lane. The children of this woman were sent for there to come here and see her before she died. Mr. Wright held one of the children by the hand when he came.

Mr. Doyle—What are the regulations about visiting the sick?

Master—When their friends come to visit them they are allowed to see them.

Captain Gavin—Did Mrs. Tracey ask for these men to come and see her?

Master—No. She asked that her children might come and see her, and these men came with only one of them.

Captain Gavin—Was she a Roman Catholic?

Master—She was. She was admitted on the 4th of January, 1864, and registered a Roman Catholic.—She told me that her husband lived with Mr. Wright, who owed him (her husband) £25; there was a friendship between them; and she wanted to get this money in order to enable her to take her children out of Bowdye's-lane establishment.

Mr. Doyle—How was the Catholic clergyman assaulted?

Master—I did not see that transaction; the Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald himself said that he was assaulted; the Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald said that the man (Wright) caught him by the arm whilst discharging his clerical duties by the sick woman's bedside; the rev. gentleman had a will written and prepared, and it was signed by the sick woman in the presence of witnesses; one of them, Mr. Kirby, from town, of the firm of Kirby Brothers, and by another person, who was doing business for Mr. Hartigan, the relieving officer, the other day; after this the Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald attended in the chapel at benediction; after which the
