

One of those events which now and again crop up in the social atmosphere—an elopement—was brought to an unseemly end at Queenstown, on yesterday. A working jeweller named Samuel Doran, aged about forty years, and a young woman of decidedly handsome countenance, were amongst the passengers awaiting the arrival of the Glasgow, the outward bound American steamer for last Thursday, which did not, however, arrive from Liverpool until yesterday. They were both natives of Dublin, from which place they arrived in Queenstown on Thursday. Owing to the non arrival of the steamer, they were obliged to engage lodgings in the town, choosing for that purpose Robinson's Hotel, where they proceeded to pass the night. But at an advanced hour two persons called at the hotel and proceeded to make very solicitous inquiries after the truant pair, and one of them as much as intimated that the gay Lothario was "wanted." Those two individuals turned out to be Detective Johnstone of the Metropolitan Police, and Detective Mahony, of the local constabulary—the former of whom had been entrusted with the execution of a warrant for the apprehension of Doran for the robbery of a large quantity of valuable jewellery from his employer, the proprietor of an extensive jewellery concern in Sackville-street, Dublin. He was immediately arrested and conveyed to the local bridewell, from which he was removed to Cork on yesterday, en route to Dublin there to answer the charge. On the detective opening the prisoner's box, it was found to contain a passage ticket by the Glasgow, in the name of O'Connor—which name he had evidently assumed—a large number of gold and silver watches, amounting in all to over twenty, and some dozen pairs of boots, believed to be the property of the fair inamorata's father, a boot and shoemaker. Doran, previous to his removal from Queenstown, was visited by his companion in flight, who wept bitterly at the prospect of their designs of future happiness being thus ultimately blasted. She also proceeded to Dublin immediately, it is to be hoped, a wiser woman.—Cork Herald.

ANTICIPATED JUDICIAL CHANGES IN ENGLAND.—It is rumoured that Chief Justice Erle, of the Court of Common Pleas, is to be raised to the peerage. Sir Vaughan Williams, of the same court, is not expected to resume his judicial duties on the bench, which, if it be the case, will be much regretted both by the bench and the bar. It is thought that Mr. Mellish, Q.C., will be offered a judgeship, the Attorney General, being an equity lawyer, not claiming a judgeship at common law. It is also stated that, after the Bishop of Natal's case has been disposed of by the committee sitting thereon, Lord Kingsdown will not again take his position as one of her Majesty's Judicial Lords of the Privy Council.

Owing to several cases of serious individual inconvenience that have already occurred, it is necessary that passengers from Europe should take particular cognisance of the fact that by an order of the Secretary of State at Washington, dated the 17th of December last, no person except emigrants will be allowed to enter the United States without a passport.
