REPLY.

Killadysert House,

May 16th, 1866.

GENTLEMEN,—Accept from me the assurance of my deep and heartfelt gratitude for the kind and affectionate sentiments contained in the address which you have presented to me.

For eighteen years have I lived amongst you, and during that time I have experienced at your hands an exhibition of kindly feeling which I shall ever appreciate.

Whilst I always endeavoured to protect the rights of the landlord, I was equally solicitous in trying to do justice to the tenantry of the Estates which were under my management: that I have succeeded to some extent, your kind estimate of my conduct fully proves. I can never efface from my memory the recollection of the happy days I spent amongst you, and wherever it may be my lot to be located, I shall never forget the many kind friends in Clare, whose intimacy it was my proud privilege to enjoy.

I cannot, in terms sufficiently grateful, thank you all for the valuable piece of Plate which you have given me; however, I shall carefully preserve it as an evidence of your kindness towards me. Wishing you all prosperity and happiness,

Believe me to be your Obligated Servant,

FELIX JOSEPH MACCARTHY.
