Another daring outrage has been committed on the Midland Great Western Railway, on the Roscommon line, at a place called Kiltoom, within five miles of Athlone. It appears from the statement of Hugh Rooney, the engine-driver, and Hugh Burns, the Guard, that within a few minutes of eleven o'clock on Sunday night, as the train was coming from Kiltoom, the driver remarked something on the rails which he thought at first was some stray geese. He called to the guard to look out. The driver immediately slackened speed, and on the train approaching the spot, the guard, driver, and fireman, got out of the line, and examined the spot, and to their surprise discovered a large number of weighty stones wedged against the rails on each side, and a similar number placed on the rails. This is the third attempt to take human life within the last fortnight upon the line.

On Thursday evening a young gentleman from the neighbourhood of Mallow, whose name for obvious reasons is suppressed, but who has achieved local notoriety for his athletic exercises, was plundered of less a sum than £300. The young gentleman who came up to town says the Cork Examiner, for the purpose of studying city life, in its more convivial aspect, and wishing to observe it from a genuine point of view, fell into company with a fair Bohemian who, however, turned out a Tartar, and charm ever so wisely succeeded in easing his pockets to the amount mentioned. The young gentleman desirous to avoid the scandal of an exposure, contented himself with placing the matter in the hands of the police, and returned home disagreeably enlightened as to the habits of a certain class in the city. Active enquiries were instituted by the police, but up to the present without success.

A most extraordinary convulsion of nature occurred within four miles of Belmullet on the night of Saturday, the 13th inst., and by which four large families have been reduced to want. By an earthquake the entire side of mountain raised from its bed, and suddenly breaking up into huge fragments, proceeded down the inclined surface, carrying destruction in its course, until it spent its fury in the waters of the Atlantic.
