THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE

TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 2, 1867.

MELANCHOLY DEATH.

An inquest was held on the afternoon of Saturday last by John Gleeson, Esq., city coroner, on the body of Catherine Keogh.

The deceased, who was sixty years of age, unmarried, and of irreproachable character, earned a livelihood by making ropes and going to country fairs to dispose of them, which occasionally caused her absence for three or four days. On Monday evening she was last seen alive on her way to St. John's Cathedral, and on the following days no suspicion was awakened by her door being closed, for the reasons already stated. She occupied a small tenement in Pennywell Road, which consisted of one room, which constituted kitchen, bed room, &c. The landlord of the domicile, Patrick Lynch, called several times during the week and knocked at the door, but receiving no answer, he called on the brother of the deceased on Saturday morning, and both repaired to her residence, and got in, through a window, when they discovered the deceased partly hanging out of the bed with her head over the chamber, with a quantity of blood in it. There was not one half-penny in the house. The verdict was accordingly.

The following is a description of the closing scene of Tuesday's debate, from the pen of the Liberal member whose description of Mr. Gladstone's speech was quoted in our leading article of Tuesday.—Mr. Bright was immediately followed by Mr. Disraeli, and then it was known that the rumours which had been afloat in the early part of the evening—that the debate would be again adjourned—were without foundation. I have not for many years heard a more brilliant and characteristic speech from the leader of the Conservative party. It sparkled all over with points—voice, language, and gesticulation, were all admirably blended to produce the effect aimed at by the orator, and he hit right and left at his opponents, no matter on what side of the House they might sit, in his stirring and unrivalled style of invective and sarcasm. There was throughout a running chorus, either of hearty cheers or still heartier laughter; as, for instance when he made an onslaught on Mr. Beresford Hope, who would always be the member for the potteries, because this intelligent population valued his high social standing, his taste in fine art, and, above all, the rich and grotesque eloquence for which he is distinguished. He hit Mr. Gladstone hard again and again, and will no doubt be repaid in kind by that right hon. gentleman, at the earliest opportunity, with good interest. The whole style of the speech reminded one of Lord Palmerston in his happiest vein." [We trust Mr. Gladstone will spare his hat on this occasion.—ED. L. C.]

We (A. and N. Gazette) understand that Captain Morgan, whose sudden displacement from the Paymastership of the 43rd Light Infantry was lately noticed, has again appealed to the authorities, and that his demand to be reinstated in order to be tried by court-martial is not unlikely to be complied with. We abstain from giving an opinion upon the merits of Captain Morgan's case, although, from the facts before us, we are much inclined to consider severe punishment undeserved. But upon one point we have no doubt, that he has a moral, though not a legal, right, like every other officer, to have the grounds upon which the Queen may be advised to remove him from her service sifted and adjudged upon by his peers. The full justice of the case might, we think, have been met, in the first instance, by the removal of Captain Morgan to another corps. Now, however, a court-martial would appear to be necessary. We hear that the War Office and the Horse Guards are equally anxious to avoid the responsibility of the course taken, each alleging that it was the act of the other.

Copy of a letter from the late COLONEL HAWKER, (the well-known Author on "Guns and Shooting").

Longparish House, near Whitechurch, Hants.
Sir,—I cannot resist informing you of the extraordinary effect I have experienced by taking only a few of your LOZENGES. I had a cough for several weeks that defied all that had been prescribed for me; and yet I got completely rid of it by taking about half a small box of LOZENGES, which I find are the only ones that relieve cough without deranging the stomach or digestive organ.... I am, sir, your humble servant,
