On Tuesday two youths made an atle the Dowerstone, a very precipitous cliff few miles from Plymouth. They got well for about 150 feet, when great dif sented themselves. However, they per a large piece of overhanging rock made for them to proceed further with any deg Indeed, at this time their situation was r and they were so afraid to attempt a get higher. They shouted for help, and of half an hour their voices were heard boys, who at once summoned assistanc rope was secured at the top of the cliff, a noose let down to the adventurous pair; made fast under the arms of the younge and he was then swung off into the mic a perpendicular height of more than 30 bottom. He was safely landed, and th
