

several local nuisance cases having been disposed of, the Court adjourned to the 3rd May.

At the Cork Police-office, yesterday, a discussion arose as to the right of the Mayor to discharge, on Sunday morning, persons charged with drunkenness. Mr Starkie, stipendiary magistrate, conceded the right, but stated that the prisoners should be summoned afterwards. The Mayor contended that he had the power to discharge them finally, and denied the right of the magistrates to interfere with his decision. He was answerable for his acts. An excited argument followed. The Mayor quoted precedent for his proceeding, and alleged that the question was raised to annoy him, and that if the Mayor were an Orangeman it would not be mooted. This assertion was flatly contradicted. The Mayor denounced the presiding magistrates as hostile to the people, and threatened that if the police issued summonses against the parties he discharged, they should do so at their peril. The occupants of the gallery applauded the Mayor, and hissed the other magistrates. The scene was altogether discreditable, and justified Mr Unkles' remark that Cork would become a by-word among the nations, and the court a burlesque.

SURRENDER OF M'KEANE.

On Saturday, Austin M'Keane, charged with firing at Thomas Horan, at Killshanny, near Ennistymon, arising out of a dispute concerning land, surrendered himself on Saturday to John B. M'Namara, Esq., J.P., at his residence Rookledge, Liscannor. Mr. M'Namara at once accompanied the prisoner to Ennistymon, where he was conducted to prison. It is stated that as they were proceeding through the town towards the jail M'Keane was loudly cheered by the people, who thronged in vast numbers to see him. The part taken by Mr. M'Namara in the matter is highly creditable to him, both as a magistrate and spirited gentleman.

Regarded from a financial point of view, it appears that the actual saving effected at these various stations has amounted during the year to £2,793 13s 5d. In other words, the saving on the estimated value of work, according to contract schedule, has been about 30½ per cent.

The Government have definitively refused the request of Mr Thomas H. Thompson that an inquiry should be instituted into all the circumstances attending the recent dispute in the Aran Islands with regard to the conveyance and sale of bread, and the altar denunciations in connexion therewith.

Elopements like miseries (remarks the Globe) "come not singly but in battalions. We have had quite a succession of scandalous romances lately, the last of which was not the least shameful. The Manchester magistrate, Mr. Robinson Fowler, who ran away with the wife of a brother magistrate, has had decency enough left to prompt him to resign his appointment. If we are correctly informed, this is not his first offence. Why should we not insert a special clause for him in the Habitual Criminals Bill?"
