MR. J. BRIGHT.

The Daily News says it cannot be doubted that the old lines of party have undergone much change during Mr. Bright's illness. Liberalism of the advanced school has made some starts, while a certain wildness and flightiness characterizes some of the movements of individual members. It does not follow that Mr. Bright's return to public life will change all this, but it is certain that his presence and counsel will temper and influence it.

It is stated that Mr. John Bright will address his constituents at Birmingham, before the reassembling of Parliament.

ILLNESS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales is confined to his room by a chill resulting in a febrile attack.

The Standard says his indisposition is not of a serious character.

The Prince of Wales passed a tolerable night, and is progressing favourably.

MR. GLADSTONE AS A SCOTSMAN.—Mr Macrae-Moir has forwarded the following note, which explains itself:—"10, Downing-street, Whitehall, Nov. 20, 1871.—Sir,—I am directed by Mr. Gladstone to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th inst., conveying an invitation from the stewards of the Scottish Corporation to their banquet on St. Andrew's Day. Mr. Gladstone desires me to thank you for this invitation, and to say that he is ever happy to appear in the character of a Scotsman, but fears that his absence from London will on the present occasion prevent his being present at your festival.—I am, &c., (Signed) ALGERNON WEST, Macrae Moir, Esq." It is understood that among those who have received special invitations to the dinner on the 30th inst. are Mr. Disraeli the new Lord Rector of the University of London, and Mr. Gladstone.
