Throne. Its substance is briefly as follows:

Throne is laid on the increase of internal dissenand on the injury done to the commonwealth the previous Government. Readiness is exsed for taking into earnest consideration, a view to an enduring settlement, the wishes grain provinces which had already made iselves heard in the Reichsrath. The address is on the urgent necessity for securing the indence of the Reichsrath. It hails with joy various bills shadowed forth in the speech the Throne, and expresses a hope that no admal strain will, for military purposes, be imid on the tax paying powers of the country, that the reform of the system of taxation will recombly a complete. peedily completed.

of such a step. The party sire separation are mere noisy demagged professional agitators, whose sole businestrade upon and ation—indeed, she has arrously make political capital by stup the feelings of a too good-natured and tifiding nation. These persons have jist uch right to represent the Irish peol the famous three tailors of Tooley-tree to represent the people of England. A ledeliament would only bring unheard-of calmitm already distracted country. It would also it did previous to the Union—the fertion of avarice and ambition, and act as a vo whose annual eruptions kindle a flame whe situated. would destroy peace, happness curity in Ireland. Every factious incendialld light his flambeau of discord at it, and combustion through the land. For these aundred other reasons the Home Rule movement be strenuously opposed.
