DEATH OF PHILIP BARRY, ESQ., LISANISKY, CO. LIMERICK.

"An honest man is the noblest work of God." The venerable gentleman named above breathed his last on Sunday morning at the advanced age of 82 years, and although he had arrived, in the natural course of human existence, at the goal of his long and happy life, it was fondly hoped that his span would be further prolonged. His demise has caused deep-spread regret amongst all classes, rich and poor. By the former he was looked upon as a guiding star; with the latter his precepts were truly in keeping with his liberality. No poor person ever appealed to him in vain, for his heart always sympathized with the distressed. Exemplary as a Catholic and generous and warm-hearted as a friend, all parties are convinced that "he is gone to the realms of bliss on high, the joys of which no tongue can tell, where the tear is swept from the widow's eye, and the good and true for ever dwell."—CORRESPONDENT.

DEATH OF EDMOND KIDD, ESQ.

The death—sudden and much lamented—of Mr Edmond Kidd, formerly of Limerick, corn merchant, and subsequently of Liverpool, is noticed in this week's obituary. The melancholy occurrence took place at Brighton on the 16th inst., at the age of 64 years. Mr Edmond Kidd in early life was cashier at the Provincial Bank in Limerick, where he gained the esteem of all his fellow clerks and the well-known old manager, R. Hunter. But the confinement to office had preyed on his health and he resigned. In his English home at Liverpool, Mr Kidd always evinced the warmest interest in the poorer Irish in that city as well as in the progress of Limerick. His death by apoplexy was so unexpected that his brother, to whom he was much attached, Dr Kidd, who had been in Switzerland, had not time to reach his sick bed before his death. Mr Kidd inherited a small estate in land, adjoining Mr Delmege's of Castle Park, and always evinced much ability in his views of the land and poor-law questions. Another of the "good old stock" has dropped off in Edmond Kidd, and of like deprivations you have had recently all too many instances in Limerick. "Multis ille quidem flebilis occidit. His remains were interred in the cemetery at Brighton, the long distance alone preventing the removal to the family vault at St John's Church, in the land he loved so well.—CORRESPONDENT.
