Fully a third of the potato crop has become rotten, and totally unfit for food even for pigs. There has not been such rain for twenty years.

The anniversary of the shutting of the gates of Derry was celebrated on yesterday with the usual ceremonies. An effigy of Governor Lundy was burnt at nightfall, and the Apprentice Boys with bands marched through the streets.

It never rains but it pours, they say, and the Freeman promises a shower of knighthoods on the arrival of the new Lord Lieutenant. It will de- cead, our contemporary states, on the Mayor of Belfast and the six sheriffs appointed under the new Municipal Privileges Act.
