Two letters, having for their theme the same individual, though very opposite in design and character, have within the last day or two appeared in the columns of two contemporaries. Both communications are deeply significant of the firm stand taken by the two opposing campa into which the Liberal party is hopelessly divided. The Rev. E. T. O'Dwyer writes to the Freeman, in language fiercely denunciatory of Mr. Parnell, and Mr. Henry O'Shea indites a brace of letters to the Cork Herald, one of them presumedly from a Cork lady, "My," fair but entirely unknown correspondent," glowing with white-heat admiration for the same gentleman. Of course both communications have been written in anticipation of next Thursday's meeting of the Corporation with a view to influence the votes of the midividual members, on the granting of that questionable compliment, the freedom of the city, to the patron of Home Rule and of Mr. Bradlaugh. In most instances, fidelity to our avowed principles, necessitated our being almost invariably at issue with the rev. gentleman above mentioned, whose violent a nati-Conservative proclivities are proposited.

On Sunday night the following cases were received into Barriogton's Hospital, where the parties still remain with their lives in danger:—Ellen Reardon, of Econywell, received a beating on the head from persons of the name of Boland, the result of which being a series of scalp wounds; she has had to make a deposition before the resident migistrate in presence of the accused parties. A little girl, named Ellen Galvin, was the same vening playing on the readway at the Blackby Pike, when a car was driven tapidly past, the ohid was knocked down by the horse and the when of the car passed over her body, fracturing some of her ribs, and she was removed in a dying state to the hospital.

The Civil Service Commissioners have just announced the rest it of the examination held on the 24th of May and four fedlowing days, for olerkshipsin the Civil Service, and we are much pleased to find that Mr Arthur Edward Bill, youngest surviving son of Samuel Bill, of Glendine, Miltown Malbay, obtained fourth place amongst the Irishicantidates, and nineteenth amongst those of the United Kingdom—a very high place indeed, considering that there were over 900 condidates in for examination from all parts of the United Kingdom.

A man named John Carroll, a blacksmith and shopkeeper, residing at Crecora, in this county, died suddenly on Sunday night. About 12 months ago be prosecuted a man named John Tallant, a farmer, who had been evicted from his holding on a charge of writing to I im a throatening letter, but the latter was acquitted. Since that time carroll had been suffering from mervens fits, and had it is feared indelged rather freely in drink. The cause of death was probably heart disease.

We are glad to perceive from the published lists of the Civil Service Commissioners, the distinguished success of Mr. I. J. Kenny, in having obtained sixth place at the recent examination for second class olerakings. Mr. J. J. Kenny, is son of Mr. Kenny, superintendent of the Mungrest Model Patm, and got, we think we may safely say, almost the whole of his education at the Limerick Model School.

At the Patrickswell Petty Sessiona in-day, before Major Finch, Mossar, P. J. Spillane and Felix McCarthy R. To the Coroner—At times he would tale a drop, and at other times he would be sober.

Mrs Margaret Howit; wife of a waive bailiff deposed that he knew deceased, and that he saw him and the was toning; saw him again about one clock on Monday morning; he was then at the opposite side of the canal to where I live; I naked "Who is there?" and he said, "Matthew Mack," I repliet then. "Bad cidet to you," and he wast in the direction of Limerick; there was no one in his company them as far as I could see; I never saw him alive after that, I did not consider him in could not appearance. The features were quite placid, and there-were no appearances of a struggle having taken place.

Catherine Shamy examined deposed—I ris de at Plassy; I kniew deceased; I saw him on Sunday on the water about twelve o'clock, in a boat; there were persons in the cot with him, but I could not say who they were reven on many there were; I me certain there were two in it with him, but I could not say who they were reven on many there were; I me certain there were two in it with him, but I could not say how many more. The boat wis at the time in the middle of the river; I will away I did not say him on the hank of the river that day, one did I see him any mother's house; I never saw him again after I saw him in the boat.

Mis. Catherine Shamny, mother of the last witness, deposed that she knew deceased whom she saw on Saturday evening; but she swore positively she never saw him after that and that he never was in her house on Sunday.

Patrick Ryan deposed—I reside at Singland, and partly knew deceased, I saw him of Sunday night about ten o'clock at Plassy. He appeared coming from Heffernar's house. There was no one with him at the time, and he was sitting on the bank at the time. I went on home, and on the way I met a man named Ross, who must have met deceased, for he was going in the direction of where I left him sitting. I could not swear he was drunk; he appeared to me capable of attending to his business. I was not long enough in his company to know whether he was drunk; he appeared to me capable of attending to his business. I was not long enough in his company to know whether he was drunk; he appeared to me capable of attending to his business.
