

Donnell controverted the arguments of the Council, and held that the undertaking was a great success; and that the resolution to prevent gas consumers continually from trifling occasions.

Mr. Spillane and Mr. McDonnell, who were on the subject, would not strengthen the confidence of the citizens in the gas undertaking which was promised. This undertaking which was promised to be from the State, appeared to be from the State, a failure. It was unfortunate that the bad gas had taken place. It was said outside of this a misfortune that the other gas companies got rid of that bad gas was supplied, this new company was a misfortune to the citizens. It was thought that it was very little to the Committee that fitters would be sent to the consumers of gas, and that they were pointing to this failure as a justification for their opposition to the water supply being taken into the hands of the fitters. It was no justification that fitters were employed that they should be employed. He suggested that a tariff of 10s. per 1000 was made for fitting. It was a breach of trust for the citizens to introduce this new style of meter (hear, hear).

Mr. O'Callaghan asked, Mr. O'Donnell to withdraw his proposal until the auditor had examined the accounts and they had the balance sheet before them. Until that time the fitters should not be employed (hear, hear).

Some thought the proposition ought to be considered. He had been requested by several persons to support Mr. O'Donnell.

Mr. O'Donnell, on the request of Alderman O'Callaghan, withdrew his resolution for the present. It was quite evident that the council committee was a grievance. He had been requested by his constituents to bring the matter before the council, and he assured them that he would not bring it before them as a piece of
