DEATH OF MR. JOHN LONG, C.E.

This gentleman, so long identified with the improvements of our port and harbour, and the development of our local resources generally, passed out of life on the 31st ult., at his residence at Clapton, near London, to the deep regret of all who were acquainted with his public and private worth. In the year 1849 the works of the Limerick floating dock having been abandoned by a contractor, and great distress consequently prevailing among the working classes, which, it was apprehended, would lead to disturbance, Mr Long was specially brought from the superintendence of the Upper Shannon, and, by desire of the Government, undertook the construction of our floating dock, a work which under many difficulties he completed with much skill in about 4 years, it being opened for the reception of shipping in October 1853. But, singular to say, such services were requited only with neglect, and (his appointment at Limerick ceasing) Mr Long was informed that he had lost his position as a permanent officer of the Board of Works, and forfeited his claim to a pension under that department, which he would have had if he had refused to come to the aid of the Government in their difficulty four years previously. During his residence at this time in Limerick Mr Long conceived the idea that Limerick, from its central position and other capabilities ought to be the emporium of the south for cattle sales, and at his suggestion, in an able pamphlet, the late Sir Mathew Barrington, by desire of the County Grand Jury, promoted an Act of Parliament establishing the Great Munster Fair, which has ever since conferred such advantages on the agricultural interests of this district. After a few years' residence in Dublin, Mr. Long returned to Limerick in 1865 as engineer of the Harbour Board, and having rendered invaluable service in the scheme for reducing the debt of the port, showing by his calculations that the Government claim of £230,000 ought to stand only at £55,000, the Act was passed which remitted the large sum of £175,000, and placed our port since in its satisfactory financial state. Our fine Graving Dock was then undertaken on his plans and constructed under his immediate and diligent supervision for the unprecedentedly small sum of £20,000. Such a man deserves to be remembered in the locality on which he conferred such advantages, as well as to be regretted by those many friends in private life to whom his unobtrusive and gentle disposition endeared him. Mr. Long leaves a widow and two daughters, and had a small pension from the Harbour Commissioners, which has now expired. By a strange coincidence this announcement of his death appears on the same day as that of the sailing of the first direct steamer from the Shannon to America—a project which he so ably advocated for many years.
