

The unfortunate correspondent, whose story about the scare of the Rifle Brigade caused his licence to be revoked, has returned to London. There is, however, no truth in the story that his employers have dispensed with his services. He is at the present time engaged on the same newspaper, and is also engaged in a book on Egypt, which will shortly be published.

The story about the Life Guards being sent to Egypt with a medical officer who had only his own unaided skill to trust to for the care of the soldiers under his charge, who might fall ill or be wounded has now received a flat contradiction. The Lancet says that the Calabria took out the full complement of medical and surgical appliances; and there is no reason to suppose that they had been landed at Alexandria. If they were, the doctor himself must have been grievously at fault. It would be curious to know how the report arose.
