The French military journals are strongly advocating the adoption of a helmet for the French Infantry, in lieu of the kepi. The Avenir Militaire, in a lengthy article, points out that a helmet will be no novelty in the French Army, as its infantry wore this headpiece under the Minister of War, St Germain, in 1793, when the four-cornered hat had to give way to the helmet.

The cholera outbreak seems to be diminishing in the centres where it first appeared; but, unfortunately, it is reported from new districts, though as yet its ravages are not of the alarming proportions anywhere that they seemed at Damietta. A suburb of Cairo is now added to the infected areas. In the 24 hours ending 8 o'clock on Sunday morning, the aggregate number of deaths reported was one hundred and fifty-one.

A very silly attempt, or pretended attempt, to burn the late residence of James Carey was discovered by the police on duty on Sunday night in Deuzille street, Dublin. Two pieces of peat, saturated with oil and ignited, were found placed against the door. They were promptly removed, but even if they had not been it is scarcely likely they would have done any injury except to the paint.

TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 27 1883.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

Mr Coroner DeCourcy held an inquest yesterday afternoon on the body of William Stoker, who was killed on Saturday evening by falling from St John's Cathedral tower.

The inquest was held in the Board-room at Barrington's Hospital. The deceased was about thirty-six years of age, and 5ft. 11in. in height. The following jury were sworn:—John O'Rourke (for man), William Wheeler, Stephen Woulfe, Michael O'Donnell, William Ryan, Richard Collins, John Morrison, Michael Ryan, John Breerton, Daniel Healy, Patrick Howard, James Fogerty.

The jury then went to visit the body of the deceased, which lay in the dead-house at Barrington's Hospital.

The first witness examined was Adam Storey. He said he remembered the evening of the 14th instant. He was acquainted with the deceased. He was working with the deceased at St John's Tower on Saturday evening. They were taking down the scaffolding. They were about a yard apart. Deceased was cutting a small piece of batten with the witness. The piece went into the waste-room. He prized it out with a beam, which broke, and he fell. Witness also fell on his chest, but recovered himself. He saw the deceased fall to the ground. Deceased fell from a height of about 60 feet. This happened at 7.20 o'clock. The deceased was a native of Constat, county Durham, England, and was about five months employed at St John's Cathedral. He was 36 years of age and unmarried.

To a Juror—Only fell on the scaffolding. I saw the deceased when I went down. He was then alive, but died immediately afterwards.

To another Juror—No one went away from the ropes. The man holding the guy-ropes continued to do so until I went down.

Coroner—Is there any necessity for further witnesses?

Several Jurors—No, except the doctor.

Doctor John Holmes resident medical surgeon, Barrington's Hospital, was then examined. He said the deceased was brought to the hospital about 8 o'clock on Saturday evening last. I examined the body; life was extinct for some time. I found on the right side of the head a wound, and bleeding from the right ear and nostril. I am of opinion from the appearance which the body presented that death resulted from effusion of blood on the brain, caused by fracture of the base of the skull, which resulted from a fall.

The jury found that the deceased was accidentally killed by falling from the tower which is in course of erection at St John's Cathedral.

Subsequently the same jury proceeded to Mungret-street, where the body of a young lad named David Hurley, aged 10 years, who was drowned on Sunday afternoon in the quarry adjoining the Corporation Manure Depot, near the County Jail, commonly known as Shaw's quarry. Constable Stephenson conducted the inquest on the part of the Crown.

After viewing the body Patrick Grace deposed that he knew the deceased David Hurley; the deceased and a number of other young fellows went into the quarry; he told the deceased to go back; he did not do so; witness came back last night and inquired if deceased were at home; he found that deceased was not at home; the deceased went fishing; he gave the deceased a gold pin to go away; he did not see the deceased fall into the quarry; he could not say why he went to the deceased's house; he went back to search the quarry, and dived to find the body, but did not succeed in doing so; he heard no splash in the water, and could not say why he believed that the deceased was drowned.

Another young lad gave corroborative evidence.

Thomas M'Carthy deposed that he found the body of the deceased about eight o'clock this morning in the pond at the back of the gaol; there are about five feet of water in the pond; a man went out to grope with his feet for the body.

Dr. Holmes deposed that the deceased died from drowning; there were no marks of violence on the body.

The jury found a verdict in accordance with the evidence.
