

labour. The soldiers were told, according to Ticken's statement, that they had no business being there, being English boys, the being evidently having been administered to dilute their departure. For the defence it contended that the prisoners were ejected from the Artillery barracks for loafing, the being an ill-feeling which led to the commission of the assault in question. The case was dismissed for want of sufficient identification.

CRUELTY TO A DONKEY.

John O'Shaughnessy, officer of the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, named a man named John Creamer, residing in Arryowen, for working an unshod donkey. The defendant had the animal shod since the commission of the offence, the complainant did not press for punishment, and Creamer was allowed off with a fine of 6d and costs.

Other cases of assault, drunkenness, and offences against the Licensing Acts having been dealt with, the Court adjourned.

CITY POLICE COURT—THIS DAY.

(Before Mr J B Irwin, R.M.)

Light Watchman Piper put forward John Corbett, whom he stated he arrested under the following circumstances:—He was on duty in the vicinity of the Park, about one o'clock, when he saw a prisoner climb over the railings from the Park, there was a woman in his company; he arrested and arrested them, and on going into the Park he found that there had been a great deal of damage done to the flowers.

Mr Irwin advised Piper to lay the matter in the hands of Mr Connolly, Solicitor to the Corporation.

ASSAULTING A HEAD-CONSTABLE.

Head-constable Phelan put forward Michael O'Brien, a rough looking fellow, charged with being drunk and disorderly on the previous night and assaulting a prosecutor. Head-constable Phelan stated that about six o'clock on Monday night he was passing one of the entrances to the Park, where he saw the prisoner, who was drunk and disorderly. Shortly afterwards a stone was thrown at him, and struck the wall by his side. He turned round sharply and saw O'Brien

Clare, said that for the last week he had been in London fighting the British House of Lords to try and get some justice for the labourers of Ireland (cheers). He was opposing a landlord, who was using every effort at his command to prevent six labourers' cottages from being erected on his estate (cheers).

Mr J P McNamara, Limerick, also addressed the meeting.

Mr John O'Sullivan, secretary of the Sarsfield branch of the National League, Limerick, said he hoped to see the present struggle of Irishmen crowned with the emancipation of their country from foreign rule (cheers).

A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the proceedings.
