

twice remanded in order that proper legal assistance. He was represented by Mr. Borrow, solicitor, and the Consul from Dover was also present as a full bench of magistrates, having been appointed.

The prosecutor, repeated his offer to the prisoner invited him to come to the Assize, and when he attempted to strike him on the knee with the prosecutor said he was struck at the time of the assault, and no stones or anything else were thrown. In further cross-examination that when the prisoner kicked his boot off and threw it at the prosecutor he had a fight with another man earlier in the morning he had a fight with one whom he met near the Assize whom he did so was that the prosecutor threw stones at the prisoner. He never had any fight with the prisoner.

As contended that prosecutor's offer was improbable and uncorroborated, the whole of the fishermen threw stones at the prosecutor, breaking the lamps and wounding
