ERICK CHRONICLE.

MINING, NOVEMBER 10, 1888 establishing a free library in ent occupying public attenefforts in this direction may meet with success, and that Limerick, with its forty thousand inhabitants, may not in this respect be worse off than Sligo, with its ten thousand, or Coleraine, with its six thousand of a population.

OTHER desperate murder has been committed in Whitechapel, the ghastly details of which were placed before the public to-day. The victim was Mary Jane Kelly, aged twenty-five, whose mutilated remains were found yesterday morning at 10.30 at Miller court, Dorset street, Spital-fields, by a rent-collector named Bower. The last seen or heard of the woman was at one o'clock on Friday morning, and by whom she was butchered remains a mystery. A telegram which we publish this evening states that Sir Charles Warren has offered a free pardon "to any accomplice, not being a person who contrived or actually committed the murder;" but this will scarcely be a sufficient encouragement to secure the production of evidence leading to the apprehension of the fiend who committed the shocking deed. A rumour prevailed in Limerick to-day that the murdered woman was in some way connected with the city, where it is said her parents at one time resided; but this may be found to be one of those vague reports which are so freely circulated on occasions such as this.
However, we are informed that the police in this city have been communicated with, and that inquiries are now being instituted, to ascertain the truth or otherwise of the rumour in question.

At the meeting of the Corporation to-day the Mayor announced the receipt of a letter from the Lord Chancellor, stating, that in the opinion of the Law Officers, in which his Lordship concurs, his Worship has "no right to exercise any jurisdiction as a county magistrate." It is also stated that the Mayor "must be under some misapprehension on the subject." The Mayor, however, declines to accept the Lord Chancellor's opinion, and expresses his determination to rely on the acts of his predecessors who claimed to act as a magistrate of the county. He will insist on doing this until debarred by Act of Parliament or decision of a court of law; so that we are likely to hear more of this question which at intervals during many years has attracted public attention
