Enright, and Francis Creagh, solicitor. It was stated that the grand jury kept the roads so badly that two of the commissioners took the contract themselves and could do them for £100 less than formerly, besides doing them better.
 They considered the town was overtaxed and getting very little for the taxation, and at the Presentment Sessions all schemes for the improvement of the town were voted down by the associated cesspayers, who were farmers. The Commissioners, therefore, asked that, in consequence of their contributions to the neighbouring baronies, they should be entitled to have two representatives among the associated cesspayers.
 They also asked that in addition to the one shilling rate which they are entitled to levy, they should have power to levy, if necessary, four shillings more. Nobody appeared to oppose, and after a vote of thanks to the Inspector, the inquiry closed.

The Drumcondra, Clonliffe, and Glasnevin Townships Bill passed the Committee stage

 British steamer "Elmfield" grounded on the bar, and remains in an exposed position.

The body of Miss Mary Louisa Garraway Megaw, daughter of the general secretary of the Presbyterian Church of England, has been found in the Thames. She had been suffering from religious mania. There is no doubt she committed suicide.

At Maidenhead to-day, a man named Searle and his wife were remanded, charged with extensive robberies at the house of Sir Beaumont and Lady Florence Dixie. During the absence of the family the prisoners were left in charge of the house.
