SMITH-BARRY TIPPERARY ESTATE.

NOTIFICATIONS FOR A SETTLEMENT.
Representative of the Clonmel Chronicle is reformed that an amicable settlement has arrived at between Mr. Smith-Barry, M.P., deputation representing 140 tenants, at Clonmel, where the landlord travelled to meet them. The principal terms are stated to be as follows:—All evicted tenants to return to their old tenements; a revision of town rents, consequent on the depressed state of trade; country tenants to receive a 15 per cent abatement, and enter Land at a fair price; tenants to pay half costs.

INTERESTING TO CYCLISTS.
The bicyclist a right to exist, an indignant comment of the Times asks, apropos of the incident of the Dorking coach; and the question is raised by a correspondent of St James's Gazette, whether to know whether everything that is said to be a "Terror" to a nervous horse—traction-engine to an advertising milk-cart—should not be banished from the roads.
The latter journal replies the questions are put in the day. To talk of extinguishing the fire is about as practical as Mr William 's crusade against locomotives and iron roads. It may be recollected that it was one of the most weighty arguments against railways, in the early days, that they could not be permitted because the steam-engines would frighten the horses to death. But a horse habitually driven in the neighbourhood of railways takes a passing steam-engine quite coolly; and there is no doubt that the nerves can easily be trained to face the noise of a bicycle. People who drive teams of horses should take care to get them accustomed to the sight of this very common of the roads.

EXTRAORDINARY INCIDENT—A petroleum has been discovered at Vanues in Brittany as startling as it was novel. The wife was absent in order to boil the family dinner water from a well that had not been used for some time. When they were all seated round the table like the Cratchets of story the dinner flashed in a blue flame up the chimney. It was found that there is a valuable of petroleum oil flowing into the well, and the vapour from the boiling water that carries it up.

ERECTION OF A FALLEN STATUE—At the meeting of a committee of the Cork Corporation Friday, a member mentioned that a marble statue of William Pitt was lying in one of the carrion yards, and on the motion of Mr it was decided to send it to the Cork School family, with out-offices and good kitchen garden.
