PALM SUNDAY SUPERSTITIOUS IN VIENNA was on Sunday (the Daily News correspondent says) a blossom with sprigs of yellow, its grey velvety shoots contrasting with the green that surrounds them. The firm belief among the people in the power of early messengers of spring. They are taken to church to be blessed, and are then placed on the beds of the children and over the images of saints in the living-room. The common practice is to make their little ones swallow three of the shoots to preserve them against danger of the kind. The children are sometimes near fainting while the experiment lasts.
