

tion, but nothing definite is yet known. The Presse this evening remarks that the Government has suffered greatly in prestige by the crisis, and says that Count Caprivi no longer possesses the confidence of Parliament in the same degree as heretofore. The Kreis Zeitung and other journals declare that the Chancellor's retention in office is in future impossible; and that once the crisis has been safely tided over he will soon have to resign. The date of the Emperor's return to Berlin is still uncertain, and it is stated that his Majesty's state of health demands that he shall completely abstain from all public business.

St Petersburg, Monday.

The Russian papers express alarm at the Ministerial crisis in Prussia, more especially on account of the somewhat obscure reports concerning the health of the Emperor William, upon which, observes the Novoe Vremja, so much depends rendering it necessary for Europe to be forearm. The Novosti demands that precise information should be given respecting the Emperor's health as being necessary for public tranquility.
