

in this neighbourhood, who has taken an active part in local politics, met with a shocking accident Tuesday afternoon. He had recently sawmilled on his farm to save transportable land, and was engaged superintending the sawing of his wood when he inadvertently approached too near a large five-foot buzz saw making two hundred revolutions a minute. His right arm was severed from his shoulder, and he flung high across the shed, his left leg flying clean off close to his body; another part of the saw tore upward through his abdomen, a portion of his intestines dropping into the ground below. His wife, who was standing in the doorway of her house, a few hundred feet distant, a witness of the gruesome sight and unable to effect his rescue, but fell in a swoon when she saw the mill, being spattered with the blood of her unfortunate husband. She is inconsolable, and fears are entertained that she will not recover from the shock.—

ROMANTIC ELOPEMENT.

Richmond, Virginia, Friday.

William Jumel, a young and pretty girl of 17, fled with Pryor Fitzgerald, a lad of 17, to one of the old Virginia families, on the night. Her parents opposed the match, and Fitzgerald's family lost nearly everything during the war, and have never been able to recover their fortunes. At 11 o'clock Fitzgerald, accompanied by his brother, drove to the Jumels' in a four-seat road wagon, and leaving his horses with the horses he advanced into the street around the house. He stopped beneath the lady's window and made a lighted signal. His inamorata promptly appeared, and as her parents had taken no precaution of locking her bedroom, she was compelled to risk a jump of fifteen feet, resulting in her breaking one of the small panes of her ankle, but though she suffered in the fall, her heart never failed her. Fitzgerald and his brother carried her into a public house about 150 yards away, and awakening a mutual friend of the parties, the match was successfully set and the young lady returned to the wagon, which in half an hour had conveyed the young couple to the house of a justice of the peace, who pronounced the words that unite man and wife. They are now in Virginia.—Dalziel.

MR. BARTON M'GUCKIN.

An industrious rumour-monger reported in the papers, home and foreign, during the week, that Mr Barton M'Guckin had seceded from the Carl Rosa Opera Company. This statement can with authority contradict, says the Independent, and at the same time it may be mentioned that so far from such being the case, Mr M'Guckin has signed a contract with the Carl Rosa Company for the ensuing season. He will create the tenor part in the performance in English of Leoncavallo's opera, "Pagliacci," during the coming Templemore's tenants have abandoned the Campaign and accepted the abatement of 8s in the pound which he had offered. The result has been due to the generous action of a Unionist gentleman in the person of Capt Barrett-Hamilton, who, to close the matter, has paid the tenants' costs out of his pocket.
