THE FASHION IN FLOWERS.

The approach of the Drawing-Rooms generally brings a little gossip as to what the fashions as regards flowers will be. It seems probable (says the Daily Graphic) that bouquets will be much smaller than they have been for some seasons past, and, indeed, it is said that with the "1830" dresses a mere handful of loosely but artistically arranged roses will be chiefly favoured. There is also prediction that with this style there will be a revival of wearing flowers in the hair, and it must be admitted that the dainty simplicity of a custom long in abeyance will not be unwelcome
