Somebody has recalled the fact that to-day, the 3rd of June, is the 62nd anniversary of Mr Gladstone's maiden speech in the House of Commons. Perhaps the visitors to Hawarden Park, who have sent in a request for a speech this afternoon, were mindful of it, and their host can hardly have forgotten it. Mr Gladstone has, however, refused to break his rules of silence on these occasions—a rule which, it may be remarked, has not always been strictly adhered to.
