volunteer belonging to the expedition. It was known that Prince Henry of Battenberg had caught malarial fever on the way to Coomassie, but no one considered that it was serious. The first message, which was dated the 10th of Junnary, said "Prince Henry has had a slight attack of fever, and has gone back to the base." volunteer belonging to the expedition. It was attack of fever, and has gone back to the base." Five days later it was stated that he had passed a restless night, but his temperature as then lower. A telegram, dated the 17th. whilst announcing the departure of the Prince for Madeirs, added that though weak, there were no grave symptoms. Yesterday morning the sad intelligence came that the Prince had a relapse on Monday whilst on the way from Cape Coast Castle to Madeira, and died the same evening at nine o'qlock. The vessel put into port, and then the melancholy news was telegraphed home, and reached the Quee yesterday morning, who communicated the mournful tidings to Pinces Beatrice. The message has been received everywhere with regret for the death of a prince who had won the respect of his adopted country, and with the most sincere sympathy with the Queen, the Princess Bestrice, and the Royal Family. A tion to the trouble and anxieties of the past few weeks. The expressions of regret and sorrow are universal. The Prince was very popula classes. He possessed engaging manners and was conspicions for his manis beauty. When he took the sudden determine tion to take part in the Ashantee Expedition as a volunteer, it was evident he intended t identify himself with the British Army and the country of his adoption. He preferred at active life, with all the inconveniences and dangers attending an expedition into an un civilised portion of Africa, to the case an splendour of a royal palace. The Dark Continent has not been favourable to princes We know of sacther royal volunteer, upon whom the hopes of an empire rested, who perished there by the hand of a native Another has succumbed in the prime of life to the no less deadly climate. Prince Henry was in his 38th year, and was born in 1858 He had two brothers elder than himself, one of whom, Prince Louis, is a captain in the Royal Navy, and the late Prince Alexander, who occupied the throne of Bulgaria from 1879 to 1886. They were the sons of Prince Alexander to whom he was morganatically married, and who was created Princess of Battenberg. In 1885 Prince Henry married the Princess There are four children of the marriage, three boys and one girl. The Priace and Princes usually resided with the Queen, and do not appear to have a separate establishment of their own. The loss, therefore, will fall with

ME. WALCOTT, a. Republican Senator, has delivered a remarkable speech in the debate on the Mouroe Doctrine, which was loudly cheered, and which appeared to express the opinions of a good many other Senators. He thought the Monroe Doctrine was mis-applied in the present case, and that it was never intended the United States should insist on the Republican form of Government alone in that hemisphere. He considered Mr. Olney's letter to Mr. Bayard as almost incendiary, and that Mr. Cleveland's message glowed possibilities of war. Instead of feeding enmity, Venezuela ought to be grateful to England, for without her aid the South American State mighs not now be free. For himself he hoped the boundary line to be formed would place the gold mines in the country of those who worked them, and that the English-speaking people who spent their, capital there would not be exposed to couplidity of the half-breeds of Venezuels, but possibilities of war. Instead of feeling ampidity of the half-bre Venezuela, but under the protection of English law. He concluded as follows :- "When I read that France, Germany, and Russia were allied against Great Britain, and that the people of the Reitish Islas, in defence of what they deem their rights, are marshalling aimies and assembling navies, ready and undaunted to face the world in arms, unyielding and unafraid, I thank God I am of that race. Blood is thicker than water, and until a just quarrel divides us, which heaven forbid! may these two great nations of the same speech, lineara shoulder in the interests of humanity by a union-compelling peace." A speech of this kind, accompanied by the applause of the spectators and the congratulations of the orator's brother Senators, seems to point to the beginning at least of that re-action which is so sure, naturally, to follow a course marked by rashness and recklessness of future conse-

NEW MENU CARDS.—We have received some specimens of menu cards which the well-known and enterprising Liebig's Extract of Meat Company have presented to the various Atlantic lines, the P. and O. Steamship Co., the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company of Scotland, and other shipping concerns. These cards possess in an eminent degree the virtue of being useful as well as ornamental. They are printed on very, superior glased paper; on the top appears the vessel, its name, and the company to which she belongs, while below is a representation of the first cular line in question. Such a real work of art should be appreciated both by travellers and the companies themselves.

A SEQUEL TO THE LATE FISHERY BOARD SQUABBLE.

It will be in the recollection of most of our readers that when the rival Fishery Board of Conservators was formed by Mr Mackay's supporters Mr P Moloney was by them appointed clerk at a calary of £100 per annum. We are informed that a cheque was issued to him for the sum of £100 and Mr Moloney proceeded to perform his duties as clerk, but up to the present the obeque has remained unpaid. Acting under the advice of counsel, Mr Moloney has, through his solicitor, Mr James H Moran, Limerick; issued a writ sgaint each of the three signatories to the cheque, and an

THE PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

The February number of this Magasius contains many attractions. Not the least interesting of these is the second instalment of "Secrets in these is the second instalment of "Secrets in Cipher," with fac simile reproductions of ciphers which had actually been in use in the Serenteenth Century. Amongst these the String cipher is one of the most curions. "The Reading Room and Iron Library of the British Museum," "The Fortifostions of Paris," "Some Hampshire Hospitalities," are descriptive aketches; whilst phetry is represented by "A Derry Dame," marrating an incident of 1689, and "The Curse of Versatility." The fiction includes "Brabantio's Love," "A Beginning and an End," "The Lair of Dornochy," and the concluding chapters of "His Honour and a Lady." There is a besutifully engraved frontispice of "Your health, Madam, after a painting by George Wiss. The illustrations are, as usual, beautifully executed.

Enraght O'Brien, Lieutenant and Custon Rotulorum of the City and County of Limerick, took place yesterday. The remains were removed from his late residence, South Hill, shortly after twelve o'clock for interment at the New Cemetery. The funeral was of extremely large proportions extending over a mile in length. Evidence of mourning was universally exhibited, and the principal exhibited, and the principal establishments were closed or hal shutters up while the funeral was passing. The route taken by the procession was by the Box-borough read, through Sexton street, Roche's street, George street, William street, and Mulgare street, to the cometery. There was a large body of Koman Catholic dergymen in attendance, and following the chief mouresers were the Mayor, attended by the mace and sword bearers, the City High Sheriff (Mr. J. P. Gaffney), and the members of the Corporation. Next marched at guard of honour of the Royal Irish Constatulary in charge of District-Inspector Hetreed, and then followed the general public, and a long line of carriages.

Lord Salisbury was visited by the French and German Ambaseadors at the Foreign Office last evening. It has been notified that recently there have been several of these dual visits, and that last evening the French Ambassador, on his way to the Foreign Office called for the German Ambaseador at his official residence. The Marquis of Landown-, speaking at Salisbury last evening, stated that during the past tew weeks the Government had received innum-state offers from gentlemen in all parts of the country to raise a new relunteer corps for purposes of national defence. The Government were about to issue a new capitation scheme, which would be found more satisfactory to the Volunteers than that hitherto in force.
