ATION LOANS.

Yesterday at 11 o'clock Mr. Coroner DeCourcy held an inquest on the body of a boy named Edward Corbett, whose people live at Summer street, who was drowned in the quarry at the end of Carey's road on Sunday evening. It appeared that the boy, who was aged thirteen years, was fishing in the quarry, and accidentally fell into the water. A little chap named James M'Namara was with him at the time and stretched out a fishing rod towards Corbett. The latter grasped it, and M'Namara succeeded in pulling him about two feet towards the bank, but the boy apparently got exhausted and let go the rod, sinking almost immediately. M'Namara gave the alarm, and a man named James Clancy rushed to the spot and succeeded in bring the boy's body to the surface. He tried artificial respiration, but the poor lad was past recovery.

Acting Sergeant Leydon described the surround- ings of the quarry hole. He said that up to this he was unable to establish the actual ownership of the quarry, but the place was a regular death-trap, as there was no protection whatever on the verge of the quarry.

The jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning, and added a rider calling on the Borough Council to take steps to find out the ownership of the quarry, with a view to having a fence put up around it.

ANOTHER FATALITY.

A man named Patrick Fitzgerald, of Anne street, aged 50 years of age, stonemason by trade, and who was in the employment of Mr. O'Sullivan, contractor, fell from a scaffold at Lansdowne yesterday morning and was killed. He fell a distance of some twenty eight feet to the ground. It is stated that the poor fellow was placing a window frame in position, and it toppled over, knocking him off the scaffolding. He was picked up in a semi-unconscious condition and conveyed to the Workhouse Hospital about 7 o'clock. Dr. Nolan, Resident Medical Officer, applied restoratives, but the man appeared to be in a very weak condition, and Rev. Father Begley was sent for. He had scarcely received the last rites, when death put an end to his sufferings.
