It was a monthly meeting, and his Lordship the Bishop, Dr. Bunbury, was in the chair. When it came to a question of sending out a notice for the matron, he (Father Shanahan) expressed his desire that they would not rush with any undue hastes this election, as he saw no reason for it in the first place, and in the the second place he had a good many reasons for the course he had taken, and which he would ex-

SAD FATALITY IN THE CITY.

An inquest was held at Barrington's Hospital on Saturday night by Mr. Coroner DeCourcy, with a jury, touching the death of Michael Renehan, aged 65, a labourer in the employment of Messrs. J. P. Evans and Company, who met with a very sad accident that evening in Robert-street under circumstances which are detailed in the evidence

. Head Constable Feeney conducted the proceedings on behalf of the police.
Mr. D. Hannau, an official of Messrs. J. P. Evans and Co., attended.

James Renchan deposed he lived at No. 3, Hunt's Lane; the deceased, Michael Renchan, was his father, and was employed at Messrs. J. P. Evans and Company as a labourer; he was a widower, and was aged about 65; he went to work as usual that day, and came to his dinner; witness identified the body as that of his father; he had been in good health; witness knew nothing of his own knowledge as to the cause of his father's death.

William Doyle deposed he lived in Upper Brown's Lane, and is a labourer; he is employed at Messrs. Evans's; the deceased was in the same employment with him; both of them were work-ing at the same job that day in Robert-street, in the store; they were working at a winch hoisting machinery; there were two men—deceased and himself—at the winch, and two others taking the the machinery in; they were able to work the winch with deceased; when the deceased got the blow of the winch they were hoisting one of the making machines; they hoisted the machinery to the top and they were asked to lower it to get it in the door of the floor undergreath; the winch were reached by a large of the control of the control of the floor undergreath; the winch were reached by a large of the control of the control of the floor undergreath; the winch were reached by a large of the control of the contr neath; the winch was worked by a chain; decesed was a bit away from the winch and had his hands off the handle; he came back to witness and reached his hand to catch it, the handle struck him in the stomach; it knocked him over and hit him against the wall; his head came first against the wall witness drew him to the window and took him in his arms and called for help; the deceased did not speak after he received the blow; could not say if he was dead at the time he took him in his arms he was removed to Barrington's Hospital : John Frawley was on the next lower flower and shouled out to lower the windlass; that would be part of his business; from his position he could not have teen what occurred to this poor man.

A juror questioned the witness as to whether the trap-door was clear.

Mr. Hannan, a representative of Messrs. J. P. Evans and Co., said there were no trap-doors in connection with the place.

In answer to a juror, the witness said he held 40 stone weight bythis own hand; he was not able to stop the rush himself; it was then the deceased came to the rescue; he was supposed to be on the winch with witness; it was his business to be there; witness could not say what became of the after the deceased was struck.

To the Coroner He could not say what took the deceased from the winch; the deceased went away a bit before they were told to lower it down; could not say if deceased had hold of the handle at the time of the order to lower, but witness had hold of the handle.

To a Juror He (witness) was not able to control the lift when the order was given to lower. John Flawley Watergate, deposed he is a labourer employed at J. P. Evans and Co.; he was working in the store in Robert screet; deceased was working there; they were slinging machines by means of a winch and chain; deceased and last witness were at the winch, and witness and a man named Quinlan were ca a lotterward over taking in the readbless; he sanguither witness and a man named gunnan were on a love lower down taking in the machines; he sang out to the deceased and Doyle to lower; the machinery then came down slowly as if it had been properly controlled from above; it weighed about 5 cwt; one man could control that; there was no brake on the machine, but there were two large fly-wheels which could be controlled hoisting or lowering; it was from the street they were taking in the machines; he did not see what occurred to deceased; in witness's opinion Doyle had sufficient strength to control the winch; they had to drop the machine to the ground; it went gradually to the ground; they had not time to get it in. Coroner—Because it went too fast? No. In answer to questions from the jury, he denied that the machine came down suddenly; if it did it would have been broken.

In reply to the Coroner, witness said he called out to Doyle to lower the machine; that was the second last one; that came into the left; the last one went to the ground after the accident.

The Coroner said he could not follow the wit-Head Constable Feency proposed to examine Quinlan. Mr. Hannan said that Quinlan was not there at the time of the accident.

Doyle, recalled, stated, in reply to a juror, that it was in the act of lowering the machine that the

it was in the act of lowering the machine that the deceased got struck.

Mr. Hannan explained the situation of the winch and loft. They might assume that the winch was on a loft overlead, and they took in the machines on the floor on which they now stood. The winch could be convolled by a light man. It had a double fly wheel, and of course would give a momentum up and down. An ordinary man would hoist to the third loft at least forty stone by himself with the assistance of the wheels, and the same thing would apply to lowering. He took it that these two men were on the winch, and they brought the machine they were hoisting to the floor on which it was to be were hoisting to the floor on which it was to be taken in. Naturally they should come a foot or two arove the floor, and then the order was given to lower. It was then, he expected, while the deceased just for a second took his hands off the handle, that the accident occurred.

The Coroner said the only mystery to him was if the machine was going round at a high speed that the other man could have kept his hands on

Mr. Hannan said that could be, as the handles were independent of each other. On a similar occasion the handle of amachine out his (speaker's) occasion the name on machine que ins (speakers, face, and threw him against the cilling. A great deal of care was required.

A number of questions were put by jurors to the total of 263. An important feature at all such sales is the class of animal sent for disposal, and the yearling department of bulls was an exceedingly fine show. We heard it said on all sides that it has been years since so many good yearlings have been on show; stout well bred calves with substance, size and quality, also another necessary requisite—colour—this elass of bulls was not the exception on Saturday, but we may say the rule. Two-year olds of late years have diminished in numbers, from one cause or another, principally the change in the dairy system so that there were not many really good the near hald bulls still there were have been on show; stout well bred calves with really good two year old bulls, still there were many large framed animals, but it cannot be said that they lad that finish and recommendation, which one looks for in a county like Limerick. Having said so much about the class, demand is the next point—as is usual in all such sales, the good bulls were eagerly sought out, many changed hinds before the auction. At the sale the bidding for these was brisk in the extreme, the best bulls met ready customers at good prices, the good ones can generally be easily sold, the difficulty is to find customers for the moderate article, and it is in this respect the benefits of an auction are patent; as it is, our idea without giving an expert opinion, that the medium animals sold better even than the "toppers," this may be accounted for that our farmers do not now keep their calves, and are not quite se careful as they might be in purchasing a bull, which policy we consider penny wise and pounds foolish? When pusiness started at 11.30 pounds foolish? When business started at 11.30 o'clock, the Paddocks had an exceedingly aminated and businesslike appearance, those present including the principal dairy farmers, not alone in the County Limerick but the counties adjoining besides buyers from Kerry, Cork, Tipperary, Clare, and Dublin. The bulls are shown to much advantage, buyers have every opportunity of looking over the animals they desire to select from as the Paddocks are roomy and suitable. looking over the animals they desire to select from, as the Paddocks are roomy and suitable. The ring arrangements were carried out without hitch or confusion. The sale continued till 5.15. Top price of the sale 25½ gns. for yearlings went to Mr. John Howard for an exceedingly nice roan calf with size, good on top with length stout limbs, and excellent quality purchased by Mr. Anthony Parker. Top price 23 guineas for two year olds was got by Mr. J. O'Malley.
